

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, July 7th, 1860.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

THE FOURTH. Unrestrained freedom appears to have run riot in our streets on the eve of the Fourth, and if a wholesome restraint had not been put on the most lawless, by the vigilance of the police, we don't know what the fate of the community might have been. As it was, their course was marked; many a humble tenement was removed from its foundation, and other property mutilated. No sudden change in business locations, took place this time, that we heard of; the Emporium of Letters remains stationary at its old stand; the Great Mart for Fashions is unchanged — and checks and passes, are dealt out as usual, by the indefatigable agent of the Old Colony Railroad, at his cozy and retired quarters, under the hill. The day was ushered in, by the usual demonstrations — ringing of bells, firing of guns, and the explosion of any quantity of fireworks. The Moving Match — its Twenty-Fourth Anniversary — commenced at an early hour and was kept up throughout the day. We had the honor of taking part in the exercises, and found it exciting work. The Captain is methodical in his habits; he would allow none to stand idle, but enforced the maxim of the moralist, "to make hay while the sun shines." We done our best to render a good account, but was obliged at last to make room for others, of more bottom and experience. The Moving Match is a social gathering of invited guests, to do homage to a time-honored custom, in the interchange of salutations with the worthy host, on this memorable occasion. It was indeed a fact, that on every side it was a holiday scene. The streets of the Metropolis were crowded with pedestrians, and the Common looked like a beehive about to swarm. It was mid-day — bells were ringing — cannons were booming, and the vast assemblage moving to and fro in search of new pleasures. By many it was a first visit since the disaster to that old relic of other times — the Great Elm; it is shown, it is true, of much of its former beauty and grandeur, but none, in general of its life and vitality; it now bids fair to outlive the present generation.

DROWNED. An unwarmed young man about 25 years of age named Jeremiah Mahony was seized with the cramp, while bathing on Sunday Evening last, near Neponset Bridge in this town, and sunk before assistance could reach him. The body was recovered on Monday morning. He was in the employ of Hon. Josiah Quincy as a gardener, and spoken of as a worthy and industrious young man.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT. George Curtis with his brother Franklin Curtis went wood-cock shooting, on Thursday last, when Franklin fired as George was ascending a hill, and one shot accidentally hit him in the eye depriving him of sight. It is feared that the other eye may be affected.

Boston Correspondence

Boston, July 5, 1860.

Business—Monetary Matters—Rustication—Health of Boston.—A visit to the Quincy Market—The Theatres.—The Old Theme of the Boston Correspondent.—Politics again desecrated.

Business, the present week is very inactive, interrupted very properly by the National Jubilee on the Eighty-fifth Anniversary of our Independence. Money, as the brokers say, continues heavy, and stocks sell light. Real estate is evidently looking up in value, as sales in the city and suburbs are better than the last year. There is a yearning with capitalists, more especially with those "in the sea and yellow leaf of life," to invest their funds on terra firma more securely; believing that Real Estate may fluctuate in value, but never run away if the title is good. In the history of the solid men of New England, that by their shrewd business qualities, have grown rich from small beginnings, it can be shown that they invested the bulk of their earnings as they went along in real estate.

The weather growing warm, there is quite an exodus of Bostonians, continually leaving here for retreats during the summer months, to our rural districts; a good move for those who can afford it, as to health and recreation.

But the city continues healthy, thanks to our sanitary regulations, notwithstanding the floods of fruits and crude vegetables that come in our midst every day, containing in reality the germ of disease. A stroll through the Quincy Market, yesterday, brought us in sight of peaches, blackberries and most of the fruits not due here until early autumn. Where did these nectarines come from? The true answer might terrify our intense anti-slavery community. Why, from South Carolina and other States where the African is held in involuntary servitude.

The Middle States, however, are daily represented in our markets by vegetables of all kinds. Those that appear as fresh as roses in the market stalls at early morn, are plucked from the gardens of New Jersey and New York, on the preceding evening. They reach here by that grand annihilator of time and distance, Steam power.

The places of public amusement here, with the exception of the Boston Museum, are unvisited by the managers. It is only by getting up a sensation on some "Star" or new play, that decent attendance as to numbers, can be expected.

Even in the political circles of our goodly metropolis, there is as yet, but little enthusiasm. Clubs are organized for the campaign, and all parties are expressing their great devotion for this Union; their loyalty to the Federal Constitution; their expressions for purity, while their political opponents are corrupt and profligate. The truth is, there is a deep-seated patriotism dwelling in the hearts of most men, who wear the proud laurels of American citizenship. They in good truth have no idea that the fabric of this Republic is to crumble in pieces—with all its imperfections, the best government on God's earth. The slavery question is so nicely coined by political leaders, that it must be brought to bear direct upon the pending Presidential contest, either in the shape of non-extension; intervention by Congress in Territorial affairs, or by non-intervention. The verdict of the people, that high tribunal, supreme over Congress and Court, where the judges will be counted by millions, will be solemnly rendered, about the 10th of November next.

Judge Douglas, as an exponent of non-intervention, stands between a party of the South and an immense party of the North, both advocating in reality the right of Congress to legislate on slavery in the Territories. This is called intervention. All sorts of bad things are said about him; he is represented to be a man of unholly ambition, wanting in political honesty, of coarse manners, and unequalled for public office. These are but the ebullitions of political rancor. Mr. Douglas came forth from the people in humble life; poor, but honest and industrious, and was brought up a mechanic. By the force of those talents, endowed upon him by his Maker, he stands before his countrymen as a candidate for the highest gift they can bestow. Those who best know him can speak of his most generous qualities as a friend and neighbor. As the nominee for the Presidency, he has defined his position. His declaration of principles are clear and unmistakable. He has deceived nobody; wronged nobody, but stands as the fearless defender of Popular Sovereignty, with the patronage of the General Government against him; with a portion of the South and the whole Republican party in hostility to him. With him there is but one kind of Democracy, applicable both to North and South—equality of rights to all.

TOM THUMB. The original and celebrated General Tom Thumb is to visit this town on the 19th and 20th of this month. Full particulars in our next issues.

For the Patriot.

The Past and the Present

Mr. Editor: After an absence of years in the prosecution of business, which called me to the most distant parts of the Union, I find myself once more seated down in the home of my childhood. I was agreeably surprised at the evident changes and improvements which have taken place during my sojourn. Quincy does not lag in the social reforms of the times. When I left, if I recollect right, the voting table only exhibited a list of about four hundred voters, now I am told it rates over one thousand. A handsome increase in population. The place has altered vastly, and grown almost out of my recollection. Many fine edifices have been put up, and numerous comfortable dwellings erected; new thoroughfares opened, and large manufacturing houses established, which evince a degree of prosperity and domestic comfort, which is highly creditable. There are other improvements which might be mentioned, but I must confine myself to but one other. The Old Colony and Fall River Railroad, at the time I am speaking, was struggling under a weight of difficulties; but I am happy to learn that it has surmounted them all, and is now on the high road to prosperity; attributable, in the main, I am told, to the energy and efficiency of its officers. I was glad to hear it; for this Company deserves well of the travelling community. Their accommodations are good! excellent! with but a single exception—as far as this town is concerned—and that is, the inconvenience which her citizens are subjected to who wish to take a southern passage. I had occasion to visit North Bridgewater a few days since, and found, in order to obtain my ticket, I must descend a platform, with a clumsy step, cross a double track, mount a second platform, elbow my way through a dense crowd, to the ticket office, and then retrace my steps, in the same manner, and wait some twenty or thirty minutes for the arrival of the cars; which I did in no pleasant mood, for the day was stormy and uncomfortable, and no seats provided on which to rest, or even a place of shelter, except a dirty room used for baggage. I felt chagrined and mortified, for I had female company with me. This feat for a man, is oftentimes attended with danger, and for females and children, always disagreeable and unsafe. So palpable a nuisance, felt by all, might be tolerated, if any one was benefited thereby. But on enquiry, I could not learn that such was the case. I also inquired how, might provide themselves with tickets or transit what ever business they have with the agent, before crossing, if the office was removed to the east side of the building, as they would have to pass it, it being on the main thoroughfare.

What mistaken policy ever thought of locating it in that remote corner of the depot, under the brow of a hill—out of sight, and out of the way of every one who has business with it, is to us a profound mystery. I am not given to fault-finding, but feel constrained to speak thus freely, for I conceive a public convenience requires it. The desired change, I understand, is easy of accomplishment, and may be made at a trifling expense. Then why is it not done? It is the universal wish of the people.

I have brought the subject up, and I don't intend to abandon it, until a remedy is applied; for I have no idea to run the risk any longer of breaking my own neck, or being run over, or endangering the lives of others from a sense of false delicacy.

SAVE EXPENSE. Don't employ a physician if yourself for any of your family are suffering from burns, scalds, cuts, wounds, corns, bunions, or any similar affliction. Redding's Rousee Salve can be had for 25 cents a box, and is a sure remedy.

"How To Enjoy Life; or, Physical and Mental Hygiene." By William M. Cornell, M. D. Published by James Challen and Son, Philadelphia: For sale by Crosby, Nichols, Lee and Co. Boston.

This is one of those new works which seldom make their appearance, and which commands itself to the good sense of all who read it—the result of many years of practical experience, and has already received the highest commendation of the press. The Christian Observer, of Philadelphia, says, "It is an excellent manual for students in our Colleges and Seminaries of learning either to be read, or used as a text-book, filling a place occupied by no other work of the kind. We commend it to those who would know 'How to Enjoy Life, or make the most of it.'" The Philadelphia North American and United States Gazette, the leading paper of that city says, "We recommend this book highly." The Ledger of that city says, "It contains excellent hints on health, the way to preserve it, and the way to protect the various organs from injury." The Presbyterian, of the same city, says, "The book is written with much intelligence and comprehends much practical observation." The New York Evangelist says, "This is one of the most readable books of good advice we have met with for a long time. It speaks directly to the point and on practical subjects, and is exceedingly rich in pertinent anecdotes, as well as speed with occasional humor." The American Presbyterian, of Philadelphia highly commends the book, and says, "The author is well known as a lecturer on Physiology, Hygiene, and for the treatment of nervous Diseases."

The Boston press, also, universally commends this book. The Atlas and Bee says, "It will command the confidence, and should enlist the obedience of the community." But to quote all the recommendations from the intelligent press of this book would fill our columns, and we only add, in accordance with them, that the work is worthy of all praise, and if it were introduced into all our higher Schools and Seminaries to be read and studied, its value would be incalculable. We hope to see it done.

HEALTH OF MR. POPE. Hostile fingers, with faint hopes of his recovery.

Rev. Charles B. Thomas of New Orleans, will preach in the Stone Temple to-morrow.

MR. LANE'S LIVER PILLS. Prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. From the unqualified testimony continually offered from all quarters of the country, it is impossible to resist a conviction of the great excellence of these Pills in all diseases of the Liver and Stomach. The following letter from Toronto, Canada, is one of the many the proprietors have received:—

Toronto, April 27th, 1854.
Messrs. Fleming Bros., Sir:—I take this opportunity of informing you of the benefits I have derived from Dr. M'Lane's valuable Pills. I have for two years past been afflicted with a severe pain over the eyes, accompanied with a nervousness and sense of dizziness; a malady beyond the power and skill of our physicians to relieve and cure, caused, as far as I myself could judge, by a diseased state of the liver and stomach. Some of the doctors tried bleeding, and various other remedies were tried, but all in vain, for the deep-rooted disease still stuck fast. At last I procured a box of your celebrated Liver Pills from a Druggist here, and feel, after taking a portion of them, that the disease and painful sensation over the eyes has almost entirely left me. I will close by advising all those afflicted as I have been, to procure the valuable medicine at once, and save much time and pain, with little expense. With sincere gratitude and respect, I remain yours, respectfully,

GEORGE W. RUSSELL, Toronto.
Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's celebrated Liver Pills manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Liver Pills in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Southern Wealth
—AND—
NORTHERN PROFITS.

By Thomas P. Kellell, Late Editor of the Democratic Review; complete in one octavo volume, bound in cloth, for 75 cents, or in paper covers, 50 cents.

THIS able work addresses itself peculiarly to the patriotism and interests of the American people. At this juncture, when it has become the duty of every good citizen, whatever may be his political creed, to aid in spreading the light of that truth which alone is depended upon to combat error where the press is free. The representations of the South and her institutions have been made to create a belief in Southern expropriation and distress as a result of slavery. In the present volume the official figures are concisely produced and analyzed, showing the inconceivably erroneous assumptions of "Helper's Crisis," which tend to irritate the South, mislead the North, create sectional dissensions, for the sole benefit of unscrupulous politicians.

The immense wealth produced at the South is clearly demonstrated, and the expenditure and accumulation of that wealth at the North, where it stimulates industry, employs shipping, constructs railroads, builds railroads, occupies land, raises rents, impels trade, conferring affluence upon many and competence upon all, are clearly traced and made vividly manifest.

By the same operation, Modern Civilization, which, takes date from the origin of the Slave Trade, has reached its present development. This glorious progress is sought to be arrested by clerical agitators, unprincipled office seekers, and corrupt fabricators of slanders upon sister States.

The simple truth alone is requisite to stem the torrent of dissension, strife, and bloodshed that is fast losing, and the pages now offered contain that truth in a concise and clear form.

Poetry.

A June Shower.

How this delicious rain
Brings up the flowers! One might almost say
It rains down blossoms; for where yesterday
I sought for them in vain,
They lie by hundreds on the wet green earth,
Rejoicing in the freshness of their birth.

With idle folded hands
The farmer sits within his cottage door,
Watching the blessings which the full clouds
Pour upon his thirsty lands—
Where written promise by his eye is seen,
In visible characters of living green.

Unyoked the oxen stand,
The cool rain plashing on their heaving sides,
And with white nostrils breathe the fragrant dews
Of breezes flowing bland;
Then, as though stung with the odor sweet,
Crop the green grass that springs beneath their feet.

Blossoms laden with the rain,
Their purple glories dripping with the rain,
Shake off the drops in odorous showers again;
And the small fragrances
Of cherry blossoms, and of violet blue,
Come balmy the open window through.

No harsh or jarring sound
Breaks the refreshing stillness of the hour;
The gentle footfalls of the passing shower
Patter along the ground—
The swallows twitter gladly from the eaves,
And the small rain talks softly to the leaves.

Sweet is the gushing song
Which the young birds sing in the summer time,
The wind's soft voice, the river's wavy chime,
Flowing in joy along.
But more than all I love the pleasant tune
Sung by the rain-drops in the month of June.

Cole's Lament.

Ah me! ah me! I am lonely;
With sorrow my bosom is tossed;
In the hands of the sable laundress
My shirt all its buttons has lost.

With grief is my spirit bowed down;
With grief that cannot be repressed;
'Tis Saturday night, and the tailor
Hath finished my new satin vest.

My cheek is moistened with tear-drops,
My heart heavy-laden and sad;
My coat is decidedly soiled,
And my "cass" is shockingly bad.

While my neighbors are joyful around me,
In silence and sadness I mourn;
There are holes in both ends of my stockings,
And my trousers are hopelessly torn.

But by far the most harrowing grief,
The bane of my comfortless life,
The most unendurable want,
Is the want, ah! the want of a wife.

A wife to enliven my home,
To lighten my load of care;
To button my shirt at the top,
And to keep my old clothes in repair.

But alas! 'tis fruitless to wish;
No children will e'er call me Pa;
I never was handsome at best,
And now I'm too old by far.

Alone must I travel life's journey,
To Fate's stern decree I must bend;
Till death must I lean on my own stockings,
And my own inexpressible mend.

An Appeal to the Smoker.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Act upon a nobler plan;
Rise, assent with honest pride,
Mind's dominion over man.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Bend not to its base control;
Bend the chords which sense has tied
Round the fibres of the soul.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Wage not war with thy system war;
Nature, slighted and defiled,
Will avenge her broken law.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Know thy rank in nature's scale;
Man to angels is allied,
Let not the resemblance fail.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Nerve thy soul and bend thy will;
Vow—and then, white'er betide,
Faithfully thy vow fulfil.

Anecdotes.

A witty auctioneer was trying to sell an old hand organ. To that end he was grinding out music, and the crowd, in sport, began to throw out pennies, when a dandy standing by said:

Sir, you ought to have a monkey.
My good fellow, said the auctioneer I had; step right up here.
The dandy vanished.

An Irishman went to live in Scotland for a short time, but didn't like the country.
I was sick all the time I was there, said he, and if I had lived there till this time I'd been dead a year ago.

Mike, why don't you fire at those ducks?
Don't you see you have got the whole flock before you gun?
I know I had, but you see, when I gets a good aim at one, two or three others will swim right twixt it and me.

A good-looking young lady recently entered a dyer's shop and thus accosted him:
You are the man that dyes, are you not?
No, replied the gallant, I'm the man that lives; but I'll die for you.

What are you looking after my dear? said a very affectionate mother to her daughter.
The daughter looked around and replied,
Looking after a son-in-law for father.

A lady looking at some stockings in a dry goods store, inquired of the clerk, who was a new lad, how high they came?
The clerk very seriously answered:
I never tried them on, but believe they'll reach above the knee.

"O would some power the gift give him, to" assure him that he is forcibly reminding the folk of the fable of the old hen that essayed to lay a goose-egg, and the fatal consequences of her effort. The old biddy's functions were capable of no such product; neither is L. S. BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

FIRE. A fire was discovered on Wednesday evening last, at about a quarter past nine o'clock, in an unoccupied barn attached to the premises of Mrs. George Faxon of this town. The wind was light, the weather calm, and the buildings well saturated by late copious rains, otherwise, the surrounding property would have been in imminent danger. It was used temporarily as a store house; fortunately, there was but little if anything of value in it at the time. It was a mere shell, and was soon reduced to a mass of crumbling ruins. As it had not been used of late, and has constantly been kept closed, the presumption is strong that it was the work of an incendiary. There was an insurance of about one hundred dollars, we hear at an office in Dedham.

The engines were promptly on the spot, and were efficient in their exertions in checking the further progress of the fire.

ANOTHER DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN OUR VICINITY. About 12 o'clock, on Saturday night last, a fire broke out in the wheelwright shop of Mr. Thomas Strangman, and destroyed or injured some eight buildings situated in Milton Village. Among them was a stable owned by Edmund J. Baker, Esq., and occupied by Mr. Jabez Sumner as a store-house; a dwelling adjoining, also, owned by Mr. Baker; Mr. Sumner's tannery—a dwelling house owned and occupied by Mr. Samuel Everett, and several other small buildings were burnt. The total loss is estimated at $10,000; and of this, Mr. Sumner's loss is $6000—insurance $1000; Mr. Strangman's loss is $1500—insurance $1000; and Mr. Baker's loss $1600—insurance $800. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. The Granite Engine Company of this town and the Hydrant of Milton, were promptly on hand and done efficient service. This is the most extensive fire that ever occurred in Milton.

GREAT FISHING. A company of six or eight "Piscatorians" from Weymouth, have had an exciting time the past week, in taking the Blue Fish. They are quartered at "Black's Creek," so called, and have placed their seine at its mouth, where, at one haul, they drew to the shore, over five hundred fine fellows, averaging between four and five pounds each—an aggregate of nearly a ton and a half weight. It is the annual habit of this fish, at this season of the year, to visit the shores, bays, and inlets of our harbor; their coming, is therefore, looked forward with interest. A number of small sharks, known as the white shark, were also captured, which neutralizes the old adage, that "You may know one by the company he keeps," for the Blue Fish by many, is considered a dainty—esteemed a great luxury—with none of the fishy qualities of its scaly companion. We deduce from one (a present) and must say, that in our opinion, there is better fish to be caught in the sea.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN. There will be a partial eclipse of the sun, on Wednesday next, the 15th instant. About a third of the Sun's disc will be obscured. At Oregon, on the Pacific, it will be total. Beginning of the eclipse, twenty-four minutes past seven, A. M. greatest obscuration, twenty-four minutes past eight; end, 30 minutes past nine. If the weather should be clear, we shall be favored with an opportunity of witnessing one of Nature's most sublime phenomena.

COAL—A PRIME ARTICLE. We have been using in our family, for some time past, a specimen of Coal, known by the name of "Tyler's Best Red Ash Stove Coal." It burns very clear, emits a pleasant flame, is quite free from any unpleasant odor, or foreign impurities, which enters so largely into many other kinds of coal, causing great waste and materially affecting their qualities. For domestic purposes it stands unrivalled. It may be had in large or small quantities, at the yard of Joseph G. Brackett, Brackett's wharf. Mr. B. has been assiduous in his exertions this season, to secure an article, which he could recommend, and which might be relied on, for a cheap, durable and pleasant fire, and we think he has eminently succeeded. His advertisement may be found in another column.

Closing out sale of fine carpets at reduced prices. Read the advertisement of the New England Carpet Co., in another column.

THE SEASON—Is full of promise to the husbandman. Dame Nature never looked more lovely, or seemed more generously inclined. The timely rains, and invigorating sunshine, with which the vegetable world is in close sympathy, is rapidly developing the tender plant to vigorous maturity. Every day we can mark its progress. Fruit of every description must be abundant; some of the earlier kinds are already coming in. There is but one complaint, the hay-crop is fair, but the farmers say they want more clear weather to harvest it.

THE NELLY BAKER made a very successful trip on Thursday last. She left Boston at 10 o'clock, A. M., with three hundred passengers, and arrived at the Point at 11, taking in about two hundred more, and thence, with her living freight, proceeded to the rock washed shores of Nahant—giving ample time for sea-bathing, to drink in the pure breath of old ocean, and enjoy the magnificent and wild scenery of that romantic spot. The passengers for Quincy were taken home by a circuitous route, (via of the city, bringing them into favorable proximity with some of the most interesting points in our harbor,) which they reached at early tea-time. The excursion is highly spoken of—all are loud in their praise of the superior accommodations of the boat, and the gentlemanly deportment of its officers.

WARM WEATHER. They have been having extremely warm weather at the South. At Georgia and South Carolina, for a succession of days, the thermometer rose to one hundred and one hundred and two degrees. A degree or two above blood-heat. It became at last almost insupportable; causing many sudden deaths. Hot enough we should think to dissolve the Union.

SUBMERSION. A worthy member of our community, of elevated feelings and granite firmness, was following the course of the new Comet, in the direction of German town, one evening last week, and when near Brackett's wharf, from some unaccountable cause, his foot slipped, and losing his hold on terra firma, was precipitated, like a bird pup, into the yawning abyss below; the green waters soon closed over him. He sank, as he thought, to his last resting place—a bed, strewn with sea-weed. The slimy inhabitants of his new quarters, were already busy with his body, when a ray of hope shot from above. Fortunately, the accident had been observed—help was at hand. Captain Lane, of the Schooner Lady, was a witness of the adventure, and rushed to the rescue before the rats had made a banquet; otherwise, we might have had a Coronor's inquest to record; a tale of horror to unfold; of an unfortunate, who, weary of this life, and its dry, unsatisfying pleasures, had sought this method to shuffle off the mortal coil, for the aqueous sports and the more genial society of mermaids and dolphins.

Our advice is to those subject to such fits of mental aberration, or a propensity for stargazing at such unseasonable hours, to be careful and keep at a respectful distance from the water.

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENT. Our friends have laid us under numerous obligations by their many acts of munificence! "May their shadow never be less." Mr. H. G. Whiting, of this town, made us a very acceptable present of strawberries, last week. The rich, blushing fruit, looked most temptingly, as they lay, half hidden from view, in a bed of evergreens and flowers, with which the vase was ornamented. We felt reluctant, although strongly impelled, to destroy the effect of a picture, which taste and skill had so artfully arranged. Mr. W. will please accept our warmest gratitude for this mark of his esteem. The accompanying favors were very acceptable; and all, we can assure him, were duly appreciated.

For the Patriot.
False Modesty.

Mr. Editor:—Having espied the following editorial article under the above title in the columns of the New York Ledger of the 7th inst., I thought it would not be amiss for those who oppose the sentiments of "L. S. R." to read it. The circulation of the Ledger is as extensive probably as any other paper in the country.

A false modesty always judges by the outside; it cares how you speak, more than what. That which would outrage in plain words may be implied furtively, in the salutes of wit or fancy, and be admissible. Every day we see this giggling modesty, which blushes at language more than at its meaning; which smiles upon base things, if they will appear in the garb of virtue! It is under the influence of this disease of taste and heart, that we hear expressed such strange judgments upon English authors. Those who "speak plainly what they mean, when they speak at all, are called rude and vulgar; while those upon whose exquisite sentences the dew of indelicacy rests like so many brilliant pearls of the morning upon flowers, are called our moral authors! The most dangerous writers in the English language are those whose awful insinuations and mischievous polish reflect upon the mind the image of impurity, without presenting the impurity itself. Impurity, secreted under beauty, is like a treacherous friend who strolls with us in a garden of sweets, and destroys us by the odor of poisonous flowers proffered to our senses."

GEN. TOM THUMB. Charles S. Stratton, Esq., whom we all know under the foregoing military title, was born at Bridgeport (Conn.) Jan. 4, 1838. He grew daily until his eighteenth month, when Nature put a veto on his progress. At the young age of five, he was presented by Mr. Barnum to the wondering gaze of the multitude, at the American Museum, in New York City. Since that time he has visited all the principal Atlantic cities in America; made two European tours; appeared before the principal Potentates of Europe; received from Queen Adelaide a beautiful gold watch, made expressly for him, and other gifts, both rich and costly, from Queen Victoria, and other nobility and gentry. He made his boast in 1853 of having the honor of kissing sixty thousand ladies, and it was supposed to exceed, in 1857, two and one-half millions.

This wonderful little General is, at the present time, twenty-two and a half years old, thirty-two inches high, and weighs thirty-three pounds, and must be seen to form a proper idea of his personal appearance, as all drawings, etc., have an exaggerated appearance. He is to visit us the coming week, as will be seen by noticing the advertisement, and give his popular entertainments in the Town Hall. His imitations of character are performed in a masterly manner; and it is truly an interesting sight to see the General go through with his exhibitions. Senor Oliveira accompanies Gen. Thumb, and his marvellous execution upon the violin gives additional interest to the entertainments.

Good News. We are pleased to see the stir and excitement produced by our esteemed and worthy merchant, Caleb Packard. By reducing his prices he has drawn a large crowd of ladies and gentlemen to his store from the adjoining towns, which helps each and every one of us, as well as himself and the purchasers. His goods are truly cheap, we can guarantee our readers from our own experience. Call and examine, and you will be thankful for this timely hint.

O. C. & F. R. We would call the attention of our readers to a slight change in the running of some of the trains on the above named road. For particulars see advertisement.

A GOOD COMPARISON. The Rev. William Roulett, a well known Methodist clergyman, residing at Naples, draws the following amusing but apt comparison between Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a ferret:

"A ferret, when placed at the entrance of a rat-hole, enters the aperture, travels along the passage, seizes upon the rat, exterminates his existence, and draws the animal's defunct carcass to the light. And in like manner have I found Dr. M'Lane's American Vermifuge to operate upon worms, those dreadful and dangerous tormentors of children. This remedy, like the ferret, enters the aperture of the mouth, travels down the gullet, hunts round the stomach, lays hold of the worms, shakes the life out of the reptiles, sweeps clean their den, and carries their carcasses clear out of the system. This, at least, has been the effect of the Vermifuge upon my children."

A neighbor of Mr. Roulett, Mr. John Briggs, adopts the simile of the reverend certifier, thus giving us the most unequivocal approval of this great sp. effie, after having witnessed its operation upon their children. Let others try it and be satisfied.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's celebrated Vermifuge, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Dr. Duponco's Golden Pills for Females. One of the most successful remedies ever discovered for female complaints. "One of the 'first ladies' of New London," who has used them says, she considers them of so much value she would not be without them, and would cheerfully pay five dollars a box for them if she could get them no less. The ingredients of these Pills are made known to every agent, and they will tell you it is the best female medicine ever sold, at the same time perfectly harmless. Price $1 per box. Sold by Mrs. E. THE proprietor of CHESNUT GROVE WHISKY, (the purest Medical Agent ever known,) has furnished the command of a Stimulant, Pure, Healthful & Invigorating, at the same time a mild and delicious beverage. It is calculated to do away with the vile drugged stuff that is palmed off on the community, and which is injurious to body and mind. In addition to the certificates beneath, he has received a Diploma from the State Agricultural Society, and is attested by numerous testimonials from Dr. J. C. ROY, of Boston, who testifies under oath to its absolute purity.

CERTIFICATES.
Philadelphia, Sept. 9th, 1858.
We have carefully tested the sample of Chesnut Grove Whisky which you sent us, and find that it contains none of the poisonous substances known as Fossil Oil, which is the characteristic and injurious ingredient of the whiskeys in general.

BOTH, GARRET & CAMAC, Analytical Chemists,
New York, Sept. 3d, 1858.

I have analyzed a sample of Chesnut Grove Whisky, received from Mr. Charles Wharton, Jr., of Philadelphia, and having carefully tested it, I am pleased to state that it is entirely free from poisonous or deleterious substances. It is an unusually pure and fine flavored quality of whiskey.

JAS. R. CHILTON, Analytical Chemist,
Boston, March 7th, 1859.

I have made a chemical analysis of commercial samples of Chesnut Grove Whisky, which proves to be free from the heavy Fossil Oil, and perfectly pure and unadulterated. The fine flavor of this Whisky is derived from the Grain used in manufacturing it. Respectfully,

Southern Wealth

NORTHERN PROFITS.

By Thomas P. Kettell, late Editor of the Democratic Review; complete in one octavo volume, bound in cloth, for 75 cents, or in paper covers, 50 cents.

THIS able work addresses itself peculiarly to the patriotic and interests of the American people, at this juncture, when it has become the duty of every good citizen, whatever may be his political creed, to aid in spreading the light of that truth which alone is depended upon to combat error where the press is free. It is a representation of the South and her institutions have been made to create a belief in Southern depravity and distress as a result of slavery. In the present volume the official figures are carefully produced and analyzed, exploding the inconceivably erroneous assumptions of "Help's Crisis," which tend to irritate the South, mislead the North, create sectional discussions, for the sole benefit of unscrupulous politicians.

The immense wealth produced at the South is clearly demonstrated, and the expenditure and accumulation of that wealth at the North, where it stimulates industry, employs shipping, constructs palaces, builds railroads, occupies land, raises rents, impels trade, conferring alliance upon many and competence upon all, are clearly traced and made vividly manifest.

By the same operation, Modern Civilization, which, takes date from the origin of the Slave Trade, has reached its present development. This glorious progress is sought to be arrested by clerical agitators, unprincipled office seekers, and corrupt fabricators of slanders upon sister States.

The simple truth alone is requisite to stem the torrent of dissension, strife, desolation, and bloodshed thus let loose, and the pages now offered contain that truth in a concise and clear form.

Miscellaneous.

The Parish Spectre.

A quarter of a century ago, the good people of the village of N — were thrown into commotion from two causes. The one, that they had lost their schoolmaster, who had been enticed into a neighboring town by the offer of a salary of six hundred a year, two hundred in advance of what he had been receiving; the other, that a strange apparition flitted about in the churchyard of late, to the terror and sore perplexity of all its well-disposed citizens.

The first admitted of something like a remedy, for another teacher could be procured; but the latter was an affair with which they did not know precisely how to deal. Few doubted this spectral existence, for Deacon David Sampson had seen it with his own eyes, although it fled from him, as if conscious of the dignity of the position which he occupied in the church.

Several old ladies and village swains had caught a glimpse at it; the latter while returning from the nocturnal sparking of their sweethearts. O, it was well authenticated. Although this was the favorite topic, yet the more matter-of-fact subject of a new schoolmaster demanded immediate action, and was discussed accordingly.

Good morning, 'quire, said the Deacon, meeting 'Squire Noddle in the post office, any letters for me this morning?

Yes, several.

If one were to judge from the variety of his professions, he might pronounce the Squire a man of varied attainments; for he has not only acted as postmaster, but played the parts of justice of the peace, apothecary and green grocer, and all very acceptably to the villagers of N —.

Ah, very correct, said the Deacon, regarding one of his letters with a close scrutiny: a good writer, spells correctly, and uses very decent grammar.

An application, I should surmise, said the little 'Squire.

Even so; and he very properly writes that he shall do himself the honor to apply to me in person, as chairman of the school committee to-morrow, replied the Deacon, with an air of consequential dignity.

Then, Deacon, it will be the legal mode to notify the members of this board to meet for the examination of the candidate.

Such was my purpose; and I pray Heaven, that the next matter may be above the temptation of filthy lucre. To think that after all our kindness to Master Slater, that he should treat us with such ingratitude; it only shows the depravity of human nature.

Do you know, Deacon, that I think it is well we are rid of him; for he was always complaining how difficult it was to support his family upon so small a sum; and then his health began to fail, and was continually pestering the board to increase his salary.

True, 'Squire Noddle, and I have no doubt but that it was all ordered for the best.

By the way, Deacon, my clerk, Jason, says he encountered the spectre last night. I had sent him at a pretty late hour to take some medicine to old Farmer B —, and when he returned, as he was passing near the churchyard, it suddenly appeared to him.

These are indeed sad times; but call the boy, that I may question him.

Jason made his appearance with his hands reeking with molasses, and looking evidently surprised at the unusual summons.

The 'Squire tells me that last night you saw the — the — you know what I mean, said the Deacon, with becoming gravity.

The ghost? yes, sir, I am willing to make my affidavit of it.

You are sure that you are not mistaken?

Yes, sir, said the boy, confidently, and giving particular emphasis to the sir.

What was it like?

It was white and formed somewhat like a horse, only it seemed to have wings, and got over the ground at a two-forty rate.

How long did it last?

I rather think I didn't stop long in those parts; but the last I saw of it, the ghost was taking a regular bee line for your house, Deacon Sampson, and going like the very d —.

No profanity, young man! interrupted the party addressed. Now, 'Squire, when we get this school business settled, we must see to this affair, for it is a duty which we owe to the community and to ourselves.

Have you consulted with our minister about it?

Yes; but he treats it with rather an unbecoming levity, I must say, for one of his calling.

Yet he would be just the man to assist us.

True, but we must depend upon ourselves, for I am confident that he will not move in the matter; in fact, he is as much as told me that it was beneath the dignity of any man to descend to such idle superstitions.

He fired his pistol in the air, and then his

This to a man of your years? I am surprised.

And so was I; but it is our duty to bear one another's infirmities with all meekness and forbearance.

That is Gospel, Deacon; but we have also law, and I like a little of both.

Ah, that reminds me that I must foreclose on Widow Rickett's estate; it was part of my errand to you this morning. The mortgage was up, and during the last year I have not received one cent of interest.

I am your man, said the delighted Noddle. Put it through, for the law justifies a man in recovering his own.

The rumor having spread through the village that a new teacher would make his appearance on the morrow, as many as could find time to gratify their curiosity, assembled at the post office to await the arrival of the mail-coach in which he was expected. In due time it arrived, and a pale, student-looking, young man leaped lightly from it, and enquired for the residence of Deacon Sampson.

He was neatly but plainly dressed; and Jane Sampson, the pretty daughter of the Deacon, as she opened the door in response to his knock, thought she had never seen such a beau ideal of a man. Her father was also pleased with him, and after some little talk, caused the examination to come off at once.

The young man bore the ordeal with patience, and answered the nonsensical questions of the Deacon and the 'Squire without any show of contempt; while he delighted the minister with his familiarity with the more subtle depths of scholarship.

The examination over, the young man retired to await their decision in the sitting room, where the blushing Jane was to entertain him. The consultation was brief. He had placed satisfactory letters of reference in their hands, and the minister spoke warmly in his favor, because he was convinced of his qualifications, and hoped to find in the man a congenial spirit to explore with him those beautiful regions of classics which were his passion. The Deacon advocated him, because he had paid proper respect to his dignified position, and thereby evinced his good sense. The 'Squire was in ecstasies, because he had worked out his favorite problem with a mere dash of his pencil. And so it was unanimously decided that Bradford Dale was accepted as the teacher of our parish, in place of Aristides Slater, resigned.

The Deacon offered him board in his own family, which a glance from the blue eyes of Jane caused him at once to accept. Time passed on, and he became quite a favorite with both old and young, while his scholars were declared to make wonderful progress. Meanwhile, the spectre continued his visits, which had the good effect to keep children within doors, while it put the young men and not a few of the old ones, to the inconvenience of making a wide detour to avoid the churchyard in their nocturnal walks.

In vain young Dale sought to convince the good people that their fears were illusive. Many had seen it with their own eyes, and could not be brought to doubt the evidence of their own senses. So that at last, determined to unravel the mystery, he announced to the Deacon his intention of passing a night with the spectre.

'Squire Noddle heard of this, and offered to accompany him; for though he possessed but little courage, yet he felt that he would be comparatively safe in the presence of a man whose talents he felt were equal to almost any undertaking, while the affair would be sure to give him personal reputation in the village. So one dark night at a late hour they bent their steps towards the churchyard, the 'Squire being armed with a rusty horse pistol and an enormous bludgeon.

As they slowly wandered amid those stone memorials of affection for the departed, Bradford fell into a gloomy reverie. He thought of the time when he had seen his own parents laid in their quiet resting places; of the joys of paternal love which he had so briefly known; of the endearing smiles his mother had lavished upon his boyhood; of the affectionate counsels of his father, until a sense of dreariness came over him, which for the time, made him forget the object of his visit into this solemn place.

A convulsive grip upon his arm dispelled his dark dreams in a moment, and he turned to see the 'Squire speechless with fear, pointing to some object which was revealed in the distance. He at once hurried forward, dragging with him his companion, whose teeth were fairly chattering with terror.

Finding, however, that the object receded as they advanced, he wrenched his arm from the convulsive clutch of the 'Squire, and commenced a vigorous pursuit. His active limbs enabled him soon to gain a near approach to the spectre, when, to the horror of the worthy Noddle, he saw the young man disappear as it were into the very jaws of the earth.

He fired his pistol in the air, and then his little dapper legs flew like drumsticks, as they bore their quivering trunk to the nearest house, which was the Deacon's, where he fell fainting into the arms of that astonished man, who had opened the door. It was some time before his scattered senses returned to him, and then the terrible tale was told.

They had seen the spectre in the form of a snow white-winged horse; and when Mr. Dale had outrun him, and came near to it, the earth had suddenly opened and swallowed him up. The Deacon was paralyzed with wonder; but Jane, having no faith in such spectral agency, with fearful eyes besought her father to go to the churchyard, for that doubtless he had fallen and was seriously hurt. But when she found that his fears were superior to her entreaties, she declared that she would go alone. She lastly threw on her bonnet and shawl, and got outside the door, when her father and his friend seized her, declaring that it would be perfect madness on her part to attempt such a thing.

At that moment, Noddle shouted "Spectre!" and made a leap into the house. The father and daughter looked up, and saw in the distance what seemed to be a winged steed, while some dark object was evidently pursuing it. On it came, and the Deacon's heart beat quickly as he saw it approach towards his own house. In a few moments the distant hills echoed with his gruff peals of laughter. He had recognized his old gray mare, which young Dale was driving home.

The mystery was easily solved. While Bradford was running in the graveyard, the arch of an old tomb had given away beneath his weight, and down he went into it. He was somewhat bruised, but not severely hurt; and when he recovered his self-possession, he at once saw the difficulties of his unpleasant position—for although he had made a speedy entrance, yet an egress was not so easy a matter. The aperture was not much larger than his body, and that in the centre and considerably above his reach.

He dared not make any attempt upon the sides, for fear of bringing the whole upon his head; nor did he relish the idea of passing the night in the place. At length he thought of an expedient. He groped about, and found that the tomb was not without its silent inhabitants; and although he felt that, under any other circumstances it would be sacrilege to disturb those wooden tenements of dust, yet by piling them up directly beneath the opening, he was enabled to regain the surface, when the first object he saw was our parish spectre, the Deacon's mare, quietly feeding near him. She at once started off, and then the mystery of the wings was manifested.

It was no more nor less than the old-fashioned blanket, which was confined to the body by a kind of half belt, which the motion of the animal caused to flap up and down in the wind, not very unlike the action of a pair of wings. The grass grew rank in the churchyard, and no doubt that was the reason that caused the old four-footed lady to stray from the pasture in which she was placed at night. The Deacon took the precaution afterwards to lock her securely in the stable, and the parish was no longer troubled with a spectre.

The schoolmaster is now known as an eminent lawyer; and his accomplished lady, endeared to a large circle of friends by her companionable qualities, has of course for many years ceased to subscribe her notes as Jane Sampson. The Deacon and his friend have both passed away; but they often took their grand-children upon their knees, and related to them the story of "The Parish Spectre."

Dyspepsia and Constipation.

This disease is not to be cured by medical prescriptions got from books. You must get at the cause and remove it. Of a dozen dyspepsies, scarcely two may be affected alike. In many cases, abuse of the stomach is doubtless the source of the trouble. All aperient pills increase the weakness which causes the complaint; to this rule there is no exception. All nostrums and patent medicines, of whatever pretensions, are injurious. In no case can any relief be obtained from their use.

Whoever uses tobacco or malt liquors, or other constant stimulant, or even coffee, and finds symptoms of indigestion, must first abandon these habits; and it will be time enough to think of active remedial treatment when it is found that the disease is not then removed. Whoever has a troubled mind, or is confined to monotonous toil with exercise or labor or bodily recreation, and finds himself dyspeptic, must first seek relief by correcting these causes; for, so long as they exist, pampering the disease, medicine can be of no avail.

If there be any drain upon the vital powers in any direction, beyond healthful moderation, it must be checked before we can hope to return to the digestive organs the vigor of which they are robbed. No doctor's stuff can supply the natural forces which only the vital chemistry of the living body can create. Like intoxicating spirits, dyspeptic medicines may for the moment exhilarate a patient and make him feel great things; but afterwards, they each make the trouble greater than before.

Beware of tea and toast, and such like diet as remedies for dyspepsia. These do but impose unreasonable tasks upon impaired digestion. What is wanted is exactly the opposite regimen, namely, food that is small in bulk and rich in substantial nutriment; something which, with the least exertion of power, the stomach can turn into rich blood to relieve the poverty of the fluids. Rare beefsteak, for instance, not fried in a pan of fat and sole-leathered, but quickly embrowned on a gridiron, and served up with the oozing juices of red life; and if fluid accompaniment is desired, let us try port-wine, weakened to suit the strength of the organs, but rather reduced in quantity than watered much.

Bran bread is of no account in this disease. It is excellent in constipation, if used now and then but not continuously. We must discriminate between these complaints. In constipation, often, the digestion is even super excellent, and the torpor of the bowels, which occasions the trouble, is due to the too thorough absorption of the liquid parts of our food, leaving a residuum too dry and rigid to be freely moved forward through the curvatures of the lower bowels. The most distressing affliction grows out of the impaction of matter in the colon from this cause, giving dull pains which banish sleep and good humor. Pills are not the remedy for this distress, but tepid or cold water injections, which readily reach the colon, and, by supplying moisture, bring away the obstruction. This treatment, though not a cure but a temporary relief, secures from distension of the bowel, which weakens its muscular power and promotes costiveness; and it also prevents it by dislodging, frequently, remnants which often lie impacted in the colon for years, causing all sorts of distressing feelings.

A Clergyman's View of the Press.

Rev. Dr. Fuller, of Baltimore, at the meeting of the American Tract Society, at New York City, spoke as follows of the press:—

I have no sympathy with those who give to the pulpit precedence over the press. Who can measure the power of the press? An ounce of lead moulded into a bullet, and put into a Minnie rifle, with a few grains of powder beneath it, will go two miles, and do its errand in an effective manner, if it encounter no obstacles. But that ounce of lead made into types, and put into one of Hoe's lightning printing presses, will go thousands of miles and do its errand effectively, not on one man merely, but on millions, and that through oceans, rivers and mountains may intervene.

A steam printing press. Did you ever go down in one of the spacious vaults beneath your sidewalks here and watch the monsters. Why, my friends, I feel something like awe in looking at them. I feel like taking off my hat to the huge machine (Laughter). It seems to me to be a living thing—one of Ezekiel's living creatures with "the hand of a man, and the sound of many waters, and the living eye in the wheel." It asks no nourishment, knows no weariness. How it strips itself to its work and toils on with a strength that mocks to scorn the might of the giant, and with a clamor as if it would shiver to pieces every substance in its grasp.

And yet, with a delicacy and precision unattainable by human muscle, it receives a fabric so delicate that a rude touch would rend it, and imprints upon it in the twinkling of an eye that which cost hours to compose. It flings off sheet after sheet to entertain, instruct, regenerate and bless the earth. None of us have yet begun to appreciate the influence of the press as an agent for the diffusion of knowledge, whether it be in volumes, pamphlets, or, above all, through the daily newspaper, that moral institution which has revolutionized not only the literary but the commercial and political world.

If you have read the Constitution you will remember that there are only two estates in Congress—the Senate and House of Representatives; but a third estate has sprung up, occupying during the session of Congress, a seat higher than that occupied by the Senators and Representatives themselves, and which continues in session long after Congress adjourns, everywhere and at all times. It is composed of the representatives of the press. There are some of them down below here—(pointing to the reporters)—making my speech for an hour. Sometimes they make one much better than I do myself, at which I have been surprised; but sometimes they clip it worse than my friends the Hindoos clipped their bowels. They would furnish public sentiment; and, at this day, when the world is as never before, under the influence of public opinion, they wield a power for transcending both of the constitutional bodies combined.

I wish I had time to speak to you of the power with which the press has invested a public speaker. From childhood we have been in the habit of declaiming about ancient oratory. What could the ancient orator do? Athens was a little place of 14,000 inhabitants. Demosthenes ascends the rostrum, and pronounces one of those orations which I can only call logic set on fire. Yet how many has he reached? Eight or ten thousand people at the farthest. There were no reporters and no telegraphs. How different now!

While some of you have seen a man get up in Congress or in Parliament, and speak in the presence of fifty or sixty sleepy people, and yet uttering words which next day shook the nations. He has addressed a million people in a few hours.

Hearts.

Hearts are of several kinds and widely different natures. First, there are walled up hearts, and those are of two kinds; about one kind the wall is high and strong; and to surmount it is a work of extreme difficulty; but if you get inside you have entered Eden.—Fragrant, and sweet, and fair as the visions seen in dreams, is that enclosed garden; and it is worth hard labor to gain admission there. The other has a wall as high and strong, and full as hard to get over; and when, at last, with torn flesh and dislocated joints, you have scaled it, you wish you hadn't, for there is nothing inside but rocks and cold water.—

The trouble with these two descriptions of heart is, that 'tis impossible to distinguish the one from the other until you have almost worn yourself out in climbing the walls.—Another kind of heart is that which, having nothing to fence it in, lies open to the passage of all men and cattle—a waste, unfruitful field, of no use to anybody, and less to its owner. But there is another kind of heart—a rare creation, but a real one—whose wall is low and almost hid by flowers. The birds make their nests in it, and sing as they swing upon its swaying twigs and festooning vines. Beyond the wall, itself a thing of fragrance, beauty and joy, lies the enchanting garden. Delightful bowers invite

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, July 28th, 1860.

BORN TO MASTER, OF NO SERVANT.

TAKING THE RAIL. During the thunder storm on Saturday last week, the electric fluid with which the clouds were heavily charged played some strange and unaccountable freaks. One discharge was attracted to the earth by the iron rails on the Old Colony Road, somewhere between this and Mason & Dixon's Lane, and passed over the track, through the Centre Depot, to about a dozen rods beyond, and there burst with a deafening noise. Mr. Gay, the Depot Master, was at his desk at the time, but he has been accustomed too much of late, to sudden surprises, to be frightened at a streak of lightning; he merely looked up—enquired what's that!—and then resumed his labors again. Not so with the passengers in waiting; many of them were nervously excited—and not a few dropped their carpet bags, ready for a simultaneous stampede. Here the cool intrepidity of the Agent was manifested; he immediately came forward, and in a very lucid manner, explained to them the phenomena of cause and effect, requesting them to be seated once more, and to wait and see it out. The presumption is, that this ball of electric fire, had travelled in this way for miles—turning all the curves in admirable style—and would have gone still further, but for a split rail—where it toppled and fell off, (a danger which will be very common these days) exploding with a report equal to a Paixhan gun. The air for a moment was full of the electric fluid.

THE METEORS which were seen on Friday, sennight, at various localities in this vicinity, were also observed here, and their appearance are described pretty much the same as in other places. When first discovered, they were low in the western horizon, and rose rapidly to the zenith, apparently uniting, and then disappeared in the east. They were very brilliant—equal in intensity to the full moon.

NELLY BAKER. This staunch, safe and commodious little steamer, is announced for a moonlight excursion on Tuesday evening next. She will leave the Point at early twilight; pass through the narrows—thread the channels of the numerous islands in her route, make the outer harbor, and touch at Nahant, for an hour of relaxation and refreshment. A moonlight view of this enchanted spot, is magnificent. Its towering, projecting cliffs, mantled in grey gloom, look like majestic castles in the distance, and their base, washed by the restless, moaning ocean, presents a scene of romantic grandeur, which to be felt must be seen. If the evening should be clear, with the moon at its meridian splendor, the trip must be delightful.

HIGH AS A KITE. This is the season of the year to enjoy to full this healthy amusement. The weather is inviting—dry and warm, and when a stiff breeze is stirring, it makes fine times for our young folks. A kite to sail gracefully in its aerial flights, should be symmetrical in its proportions; the appendage should be neither too long or too short, too heavy or too light; but adapted to the size and weight of the body; much depends on this in regulating its motions. Franklin, in his philosophical experiments had recourse to its agency; he drew lightning from the clouds by attaching metallic wires to it—and in this way, identified the electricity of the clouds with that which surrounds the earth, collected by an electrical machine. This discovery, led to the erection of lightning rods, and his enunciation of the laws by which it is governed, to its use as an agent in electric telegraphs. Franklin, at one time, had at his house in Philadelphia, a chime of small bells, which he rang by the electricity collected from the atmosphere during a thunder storm.

EXCURSION. The Scholars of the High and Adams Schools, with their Teachers, Samuel A. Duncan and Stephen Morse, made an excursion, yesterday, down the harbor, in the Nelly Baker, and spent the day at Nahant. We have not the particulars at the time of our going to press, but shall be pleased to make room for them in our next. We have no doubt, however, that they had a pleasant time.

Pic Nic. The Universalist Sabbath School in this town propose holding their annual Pic Nic the second week in August at Island Grove. Full particulars in next week's paper.

THE PROSPECT. We have heard many enquiries of late in regard to the progress made by those who have our gas works in hand. We have been assured by those in the secrets of the business, that they are approaching completion as fast as circumstances will admit; there has been some delay about pipe, the manufacturers not being able to furnish it fast enough. The buildings are in course of erection; the basin for the Gasometer is nearly excavated, and the prospect now is, by the time the long evenings set in, every thing will be in readiness to supply us with a pure light, pleasant and agreeable, and which is always trimmed and ready for use.

WHORTLEBERRIES. This early summer fruit has already made its appearance in our markets. It is said they will be very plenty this year. The whortleberry is an extremely hardy fruit, and may be made very palatable in numerous ways; they take a place among the choicest; if they were not so common, they would be more highly prized. Great quantities find their way to the Boston market, over the railroads, from the interior of this and other States.

DOG DAYS. According to the best authority, made demonstrable by mathematical calculation, our beautiful little planet was brought, on the 25th, into baneful influence with Sirius, the Dog Star—and that we shall be held under its spell five weeks or more. Some people have a great horror for this season; we don't know why. We have no apprehension; having passed through a great many, and found them as pleasant as any other. In our latitude, it is mid-summer—when we experience the greatest heat—consequently the greatest lassitude—with which the Dog Star has no more to do than the Mai in the Moon.

CHRIST CHURCH. The walls have been raised—the roof put on, and the interior is now receiving the finishing touch of the artist. It is a modest little building, and looks as if it were a temple where true piety might dwell.

AGAIN we are called upon by the munificence of our friends, to make due acknowledgments for their kindness. Mr. Charles L. Pierce, of this town, has seen fit to remember us in the kindest manner, by a present of two boxes of the different varieties of Currants—the red and white—fresh from his own garden. In size and richness, they are full equal to any we have seen. The cultivation of this fruit has certainly arrived to great perfection. Mr. P. has our best thanks and the remembrance of our family, for this grateful token of his friendship.

SINGULAR USE FOR DOGS. A planter in Virginia, has two pointer dogs, which can vomit tobacco in a day than any two hands he owns. The dogs run along the furrows and show the greatest sagacity in detecting worms, finding them by scent and eye. They never injure the plants, and where the field lands overlook the insect, the dogs are sure to find them. The animals devour the insects eagerly, and never give up the chase until they become completely gorged.

EXTENSIVE SUNDAY SCHOOL OPERATIONS. The American Sunday School Union which comprises various denominations, has within the past year, organized throughout the country, over two thousand Sunday Schools, where some existed before, with more than 14,000 teachers, and 83,278 scholars. This is truly a noble work, and one in which the whole Christian public should be interested. We are glad to know that this Sabbath School Missionary work is carried on by the Union in Massachusetts, where, strange to say, we have 75,000 children, not connected with any Sunday School. Scores of villages, neighborhoods, and parts of towns, in our Commonwealth have no Sunday Schools. Within a short time, the missionary of the Union, has organized a number of their schools in Massachusetts with the most gratifying success. As he depends upon donations from Sunday Schools, churches and individuals, for means to furnish the destitute places, with books and papers, it is to be hoped that the most liberal appropriations will be made. The great work of organizing Sunday Schools all over the country, calls for a large amount of money; and donations, either for the missionary of Massachusetts, or for any state in New England, or for the West, should be sent to N. P. Kemp, Treasurer, 141 Washington Street. It should be remembered that the Depository of the American Sunday School Union has been removed from Cornhill to No. 141 Washington Street, Boston, nearly opposite the Old South Church.

A LARGE TROUT. There was recently taken from Lake Bigler, in San Francisco, a trout, which measured three feet in length, and proportionally thick and fat.

DEATH OF JOSEPH GALES. Mr. Joseph Gailes, senior editor of the National Intelligencer, published at Washington city, (D. C.) died at his residence, in Elkington, near that city, on Saturday evening last, aged seventy-four years. He was the oldest publisher in the country at the time of his decease.

Commencement at Harvard University.—Gov. Banks.—Judge Douglas.—Times of holding certain State Elections.—Results an Omen on the next Presidency.

The shades of Harvard College, were brightened by the advent of another Commencement during the past week. Judging from appearances, it was a joyous time to many. Business was in part suspended in this city, and quite a concourse found their way in the Horse-cars, to witness the public exercises at Cambridge. Many distinguished visitors were there from various parts of the Union. On Thursday, President Felton was duly inaugurated as successor to the Rev. Dr. Walker. This gave rise to the usual ceremonies and festivals. Governor Banks' speech at the banquet, was alluded to in very complimentary terms by Hon. Edward Everett, President Felton and others. An eulogium from such high sources, is honorable to Governor Banks and the people who made him Governor. He is a self-educated man—the arbiter of his fortune and fame—from a poor boy in the factory, he has mounted high on the rugged hill of fame and is now one of the most prominent and honored men of Massachusetts. Judge Douglas was present at Commencement, and was received with much courtesy and respect by Governor Banks and other leading men of the Republican party. His reception as a whole in Boston, was highly enthusiastic, and his speeches to the multitudes were brief, explicit, and characterized with good sound sense. His address was greatly admired, made on the occasion of his visit to the battle ground on Bunker's Hill. He has certainly left a good impression on the public mind here, and has won many new friends to his cause. The State election in Missouri, which occurs the first Monday of August next, and of Maine, which is the second Monday of September next, will in their results, test the strength of Mr. Douglas on the popular vote, previous to the National election, on Tuesday after the first Monday of November. State elections come off in Vermont the first Tuesday of September; Pennsylvania the second Tuesday in October; North Carolina the first Thursday in August; South Carolina the second Monday in October; Georgia and Florida the first Monday in October; Alabama, Texas, Kentucky and Arkansas the first Monday in August. Tennessee the first Thursday in August. Ohio and Indiana the second Tuesday in October; Iowa in October, and California in September. Some of the elections are, however, biennial. It is worthy of remark, that with the exception of New England, no State in the Union elects its Governor for a term less than two years, while fourteen States choose their Governor for the constitutional term of four years; New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Virginia for three years. The result of the State elections, that occur as above stated, between now and November next, will have a bearing upon the Presidential election, and afford somewhat of a prognostic as to whom is to be the successful candidate. The Douglas party have great hopes in carrying Kentucky and Missouri, next month, and making large gains in Maine, the second Monday in September next. But we shall see. x.

PRINTING OFFICE RULES. "The Printer" newspaper gives the following good advice to those who visit printing offices. We commend the "Rules" to the especial attention of "visitors." Idlers and loafers are not desired at any time; and their detestable company is strictly prohibited on the Sabbath.—

1. Enter softly.
2. Sit down quietly.
3. Subscribe for the paper.
4. Don't touch the paper.
5. Say nothing interesting.
6. Engage in no controversy.
7. DON'T SMOKE.
8. Keep six feet from the table.
9. Don't talk to the workmen.
10. Hands off the papers.
11. Eyes off the manuscript.
12. Touch not!
13. Let the "devil" alone.

Gentlemen observing these rules when entering a printing office, will greatly oblige the proprietor, and need not fear the "devil." They should always, however, give him (the "devil") his due.

The ladies, who sometimes bless us for a few moments with their presence, are not expected to keep the rules strictly, and, indeed, it will be agreeable to us to have them break the ninth rule as often as convenient. Boys unaccompanied by their fathers, are particularly requested to keep their hands in their pockets.

GREAT LONGEVITY. A few days since a lady died in Philadelphia, 107 years of age, and on the day of her funeral there were present five brothers and sisters, the youngest being over ninety years of age, and the oldest being one hundred and eleven. A sight like this has but seldom if ever been witnessed in this or any other country.

MIXOT'S LIGHT HOUSE. The last stone of this famous structure was laid on the 24th of last June. Work on the ledge, for the foundation, commenced on the 12th June, 1855. It will be finished inside and lighted by one of the first order of Fresnel lights some time in September.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

There are twenty steamers running between Boston and ports in the United States and British Provinces. Ten of these are running to Southern ports.

The largest tree in Massachusetts is said to be an elm situated upon the Hubbard Farm in Andover. It is one hundred and ten feet high, and six feet from the ground measures twenty-two and a half feet in circumference.

A tornado passed over Springfield, (Ohio,) on the 1st inst., which destroyed a number of buildings and injured others, inflicting damages to the amount of fifty thousand dollars. No lives were lost.

The library of Harvard College contains 91,500 volumes, and occupies two miles and 175 1-2 feet of shelf room, averaging about an inch and a half to a volume.

A man got drunk in New York City on the Fourth, and crawled into an old out house to sleep off his bad feelings. Some boys, not aware of their proximity to him fired off a cannon, the charge from which entered his legs, and he died.

They are having uncommonly hot days and nights in Charleston, (S. C.)—with the mercury above one hundred in the shade, and people dying from sun-stroke by the dozen daily.

At a recent session of the Alexandria county court, Virginia, two men of mixed blood having proved themselves to be Octoroons, or persons having one eighth negro blood, asked the court to certify that they were not negroes. The evidence being heard, the request was granted; and so, henceforth Octoroons are not negroes.

The city of Havana is advertising for cracked granite, which is to be introduced as an experiment of the McAdam system in Cuba.

The Fall River (Mass.) Journal chronicles the fact that on the Fourth, upwards of thirty-five thousand bottles of small beer were sold in that small city.

A man in Delaware died a short time since, from having eaten two hundred oysters and a half a peck of cherries the same day.

An old man in Soles, New Jersey, who is owing a physician a bill of thirty dollars, and unable to pay it, has decided to the doctor his body for dissection after his demise.—The deed has been accepted and a receipt given by the physician.

The Courier says the Great Eastern will probably visit Boston in August.

Seven million acres of land are to be offered for public sale in Kansas and Nebraska in August, and upward of four million acres in Minnesota in October.

About one hundred and twenty new patents, it is said, are issued every week from the Patent Office in Washington.

The stagnation of business which has prevailed in the ship yards since 1856 is generally giving way to increasing business.—There are more ships now on the stocks and under contract than at any time for the last three years.

The sleeping cars which have just been introduced on the New York Central Railroad have a high ventilator raised in the roof, running the entire length of the cars.—By this, ventilation is had without opening the side windows of the cars.

The harvest in Pennsylvania, not only of grain, but of grapes, fruit and vegetables generally, has been, with a few light exceptions, the most bountiful and favorable in that State, perhaps, for twenty years.

City railroads having proved so successful in this country they are about adopting them in England. The first one is to be built in Birkenhead, opposite Liverpool, and the contract for building the road has been given to a Bostonian.

The Judges of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine have decided that the Legislature of the State has no right to enact laws regulating the running of railroad trains, where that power by the charter is given to the Directors. The Legislature has control over all that relates to the safety of passengers, but none which appertains merely to the convenience of the travelling public.

The German population in this country is estimated at 7,500,000.

No two things differ more than hurry and despatch. Hurry is the mark of a weak mind, despatch of a strong one.

Camphor is the most powerful agent to drive away mosquitoes. A camphor bag hung up in an open casement will prove an effectual barrier to their entrance. Camphorated spirit applied as perfume to the face and hands, will act as an effectual preventive; but when bitten by them aromatic vinegar is the best antidote.

The cattle disease is no longer spreading. No positive new case of the disease has been reported to the Commissioners since the recent Session of the Legislature. The new Board probably will not find it necessary to kill many cattle.

Officers were lately stationed in Winter and School Streets, Boston, one day, to ascertain the amount of foot travel through those two thoroughfares, and the result was, as follows, the count being taken between the hours of 7 A. M. and 7 P. M.: Winter street, 14,705; School street, 19,760.

Advices from Guanantamo, (Cuba,) says that ten or twelve American vessels have landed five thousand Africans within six weeks. One was an American steamer.

A large strawberry grower at Doyleston, (N. J.) says that fruit can be raised at a cost of about half a cent per quart.

The scales of iron that accumulate around the anvil of a blacksmith's shop are more valuable than manure for peach trees. A shovel full put around a healthy peach tree will be very likely to keep it in good condition.

The expenses of the Rhode Island state government in the year 1856, were $12,945; ditto in 1856, $220,052.

A Paris letter states that a pistol ball was found in one of Prince Jerome Bonaparte's lungs after death, which had been lodged there more than fifty years ago in a duel.

Jerome Bonaparte, the last of that family which the genius of Napoleon raised from obscurity, died last month in Paris. He was fifteen years younger than his illustrious brother. His first wife, whom he repudiated by order of the Emperor, still lives with their son at Baltimore.

The Boston Pilot speaks of Roman Catholic enterprise in the country, and intimates that Massachusetts takes the lead in building churches.

A Somerset correspondent of the Fall River News nominates as the Republican gubernatorial candidate, Hon. Charles Francis Adams, of this town.

CHEMICAL SOAP. We would call the attention of our readers to Naaman Torrey's advertisement in our columns. His Soap has been tried by many of the first families in this town, who speak in high terms of its good qualities. We would say to our ladies, if they would like some soap superior to anything they have ever used, try Mr. Torrey's Chemical Soap, prepared by himself in Weymouth.

A TRUISM. If you wish to make use of a man, ascertain the measure of his susceptibility to flattery; for all you can raise him, in self-estimation, will be at your disposal. Convince any man that you can teach him to play on two fiddles, equally well, at the same time, and he will promise that one shall be played mainly for your advantage.

ACCEPTANCE. We learn from the Dedham Gazette, that the Hon. George S. Hillard, of Boston, has accepted the invitation of the Norfolk Agricultural Society, to deliver the address at the annual exhibition of that Society in September.

FACTS, WITHOUT COMMENT.—The public should know them.

New York, October 10, 1852.
Mrs. Hardy, No. 119 Suffolk street, writes us that she has been troubled with worms for some three years, and that she used one vial of Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa., which brought away over fifty large worms. Her usual good health immediately returned.

Mrs. Quigby, No. 182 E-sex street, New York, under date of November 23, 1852, writes us that she had a child which had been unwell for more than two months. She procured a bottle of M'Lane's Vermifuge, and administered it.—The child passed a large quantity of worms, and in a few days was as hearty as ever it had been. Parents, with such testimony before them, should not hesitate when there is any reason to suspect worms, and lose no time in procuring and administering Dr. M'Lane's Vermifuge. It never fails, and is perfectly safe.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's celebrated Vermifuge manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

RECOVERED. We were gratified a few days since, by the cordial shake of the hand of our esteemed friend, George Curtis, of this town, who was recently injured in one of his eyes by a chance shot, depriving him of his sight in that organ, and which it was feared would injure the vision of the other eye, if not prove fatal provided the shot had entered the brain. He bids fair yet to live many years, and we trust to a goodly old age.

Miscellaneous.

My First Lesson.

BY MRS. ANN S. STEVENS.

Abby Ponderson—yes, that was the name of my first school-mistress. She was one of the stiffest, nicest and most thoroughly prim old maids that ever took care of other people's children. She taught in a little red school-house, in "Scrub Oak," half a mile back of Falls Hill. I like to be particular in the geography, though I never opened an atlas in my life when Miss Ponderson received me into her alphabet class.

I see her now, sitting so very upright in her high-backed chair—solemnly opening the blue-paper covers of Webster, and calling me by name—I see the sharp pointed scissors lifted from the chain at her side—I hear the rap, rap, of her thimble against the wooden covers of that new spelling book—yes, I feel myself dropping that bashful little courtesy and blushing under those solemn grey eyes, as she points down the long row of Roman capitals and tells me to read. I remember it all; she had on a brown calico dress; her hair was parted plainly and done up in a French twist behind; there was a good deal of grey in that black hair, and around her prim mouth any quantity of fine wrinkles; but her voice was low and sweet; she was stiff but not cross, and the little girls loved her in a degree, though she did give them long stretches of lemming and over-seams to sew.

My first school-mistress came from some neighboring town. She was neither Episcopalian nor Presbyterian, but wore the nicest little Methodist bonnet, made of silver grey satin without a bow or a bit of lace—a Quaker bonnet cut short. Then she had a dainty silk shawl, tinted like a dove's wing, and always carried her handkerchief folded when she went to prayer meeting.

The school-house stood on the bank of a small stream which turned a saw-mill just above; it was so overshadowed by young hemlocks that you could only hear the singing of the waters as they stole by the windows. Some very mossy logs lay between the windows and the bank, and a noble pear tree full of golden fruit hung its shadow over the school-house, as we got our lessons.

Those great bell pears were cruelly tantalizing as they grew and ripened and the green leaves; but when they came rustling down from the boughs and fell in the grass directly under us, so plump and mellow, it was really too much for human nature.

But Miss Ponderson was strict; she read the golden rule every Monday, and kneeling at her high-backed chair, prayed for us diligently night and morning all the week, while we stood mutely around. Indeed, her control was so perfect that we hardly ventured to look at the pears when they fell; the idea of touching them never entered our heads.

But one thing troubled us very much; just as the fruit grew ripest, Miss Ponderson began to take her dinner-basket and hymn-book and cross into the meadow back of the school-house, where she would disappear down the hemlock bank and stay sometimes during the entire hour of noon.

One day I was startled at my lesson by a splendid pear that came rustling from the topmost boughs of the tree, and rolled down toward the mill stream. Dan Haines, who was sitting on the second class bench close by me, whispered from behind his spelling-book "That the mistress would be after that 'ere pear about noon time."

Mary Bell, a little girl in my class, looked suddenly up and nodded her head. We had found it all out; that was why the mistress crossed the bank every noon. She was fond of pears, and wanted them all to herself—greedy old thing! We began to feel very angry and ill-used; not one of us would have thought it. What right had she to the pears? they did not belong to her more than to us.

In fact, Mary Bell's father, who owned the saw-mill, and lived in the great house with pointed gables just in sight, was the only person who had a claim on that tree or its fruit.

When the recess came, we were upon the watch. Just as usual, the mistress took her dinner-basket, and, getting over the fence, went toward the hemlock bank. Once she stooped as if to tie her shoe.

See, see! whispered Dan, who was on his knees, peeping through the rail fence. She's making believe to tie up her shoe; oh, the old maid is cute! I told you so. Let's jump over and see the mean old thing eat it!

Dan climbed the fence as he spoke, and we followed, a little frightened, but resolute to find out the truth.

Dan went before, treading very softly and looking every where in the grass. Once he stooped, made a dart at a turf of clover, and up again. I caught a glimpse of something yellow in the hand he was pushing with considerable hurry and trouble into his pocket, that swelled out enormously after. But Dan looked straight-forward into the hemlocks and began to whistle, which frightened us half out of our wits, and we threatened to run back again unless he stopped.

Dan flared up at this, and went back in high dudgeon, trying to cover his pocket with one hand.

I think Mary Bell and I would have gone back too, but at that moment we heard a voice from the hemlock bank.

Come, come, whispered Mary Bell; let's see if she has really got it.

We crept forward very softly and looked over into the stream. It had a dry pebbly shore, broken with a few moss covered stones, all in deep shadow—so the hemlocks overhung the spot like a tent. Upon one of these sat our school-mistress, with her hymn-book open, singing. Her voice was soft and clear, and joined in with the murmurs of the stream, solemn and sweet.

The old maid sang her little hymn, closed the book, and casting a timid glance up and down, to be sure she was in solitude, knelt down by the mossy stone, which had been her seat, and began to pray.

The mistress was alone with her God; she had only very simple language in which to tell Him her wants, but its earnestness brought the tears into our eyes.

Poor soul, she had been grieving all the time that no one of the scholars ever knelt by her side at prayer. She besought God with such meek earnestness to touch our hearts and bring us humbly to his feet, kneeling, as she did, for a blessing or in thankfulness. She told the Lord, as if he had been her only father, how good and bright and precious we were, lacking nothing but his holy grace. She so humbled herself, and pleaded for us, that Mary Bell and I crept away from the bank, crying softly, and ashamed to look each other in the face.

Dan Haines was sitting in a crotch of the fence, eating something very greedily; but we avoided him, and went into the school-house, quite heart broken at our own night-

After a while the mistress came in, looking comforted by some good friend.

Mary Bell and I were still and serious all the afternoon. Once or twice I saw her beautiful blue eyes looking at me wistfully over her spelling-book, but we knew that it was wrong to whisper, and for the world would not have disobeyed the mistress then.

At last the classes were all heard. The Mistress looked, we thought, sadly around at the little benches, arose, laid her hand on the high-backed chair, and sunk slowly to her knees. The children stood up as usual. I looked at Mary Bell; she was trembling a little; the color came and went on her face. My heart beat quick—I felt a glow on my cheek, something soft and fervent stirring at my heart. We both rose hand in hand, walked through the scholars up to that high-backed chair, and knelt softly down by the mistress. She gave a little start, opened her eyes, and instantly they filled with tears; her lips trembled, and then came a burst of thanksgiving to God for having answered her prayer. She laid her hand first upon one head and then upon the other. She called down blessings upon us, she poured forth her whole soul eloquently as she had done under the hemlock boughs.

I have heard burning prayers since, but never one that entered the depths of my memory like that.

The next day Mary Bell and I followed the mistress down to the mill stream, for we felt guilty till she knew all. But she persisted that God himself had led us to the bank. No matter though Dan Haines appeared to have done it. Wicked instruments were often used to work out good. God had answered her prayer and it was enough. She only hoped we would not be ashamed of having knelt by our lonely school mistress.

Ashamed! For the first time in our lives, we threw our arms around Abby Ponderson's neck and kissed her. Poor soul! she hardly knew how to take it; those withered lips had been so long unused to kisses that they began to tremble as ours touched them. We were very young, and could not comprehend why she hid her face between those stiff hands and wept so piteously.

No Marrow in his Bones.

The man who has no enemies is a mere drone in the great hive of created intelligence. He is a milk-and-water man, who contents himself with doing no harm, while it is notorious he is doing no good. Such men are time-serving, fence-riding, go-betweeners, who creep after men of position and property, and hypocritically bow to men in the humble walks of life, take no part in public sentiment, and smile and smirk upon all they come in contact. They glide through life undisturbed, and sink to obscure graves, unwept, unhonored and unsung.

Cure for Ingrowing Nails.

It is stated by a correspondent that cauterization by hot tallow is an immediate cure for ingrowing nails. He says: The patient on whom I first tried this was a young lady, who had been unable to put on a shoe for several months, and decidedly the worst case I have ever seen. The disease had been of long standing. The edge of the nail was deeply undermined, the granulations formed a high ridge, partly covered with skin, and pus constantly oozed from the root of the nail, the whole toe was swollen, and extremely tender and painful. My mode of proceeding was this: I put a very small piece of tallow in a spoon and heated it over a lamp till it became very hot, and dropped two or three drops between the nail and granulations. The effect was almost magical. Pain and tenderness were at once relieved, and in a few days the granulations were all gone, the diseased parts dry and destitute of feeling, and the edge of the nail exposed so as to admit of being pared away without any inconvenience. The cure was complete, and the trouble never returned. I have tried this plan repeatedly since, with the satisfactory results. The operation causes but little if any pain, if the tallow is properly heated. A repetition might in some cases be necessary, although I have never met with a case that did not yield to one application. Admitting the theory of Dr. Lorrinser to be correct, the modus operandi is very plainly to be seen.—The liquid cautery insinuates itself in every interstice, under the nail, accomplishing in one minute without pain all that can be effected by the painful application of nitrate of silver for several weeks.—Medical and Surgical Journal.

Taxes in Quincy, for 1860.

We have taken considerable pains to procure a correct list of the names and the amount of tax paid by each individual, who paid over $1.50, in this town, for the year 1860; knowing that it would be pleasing to many of our citizens to compare their tax with that of their neighbor's, also to see who the heavy tax-payers are. We shall insert apart of the list in this week's paper and continue it in our next.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, August 4th, 1860.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

ENCAMPMENT. The Fourth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Colonel A. B. Packard, will hold a three days' encampment, the 29th, 30th, and 31st, of the present month, on the Plain, opposite the residence of the late Deacon Josiah Adams, at the southwest part of this town. A very suitable spot, it is a large level, grassy plain, which in former years was used as a race course. This encampment is looked forward to with no small degree of interest. The Fourth Regiment enjoys a distinguished reputation as a military corps—and its commander, is held in high estimation, as a perfect disciplinarian and accomplished officer.

FALSE ALARMS. There has been considerable complaint of late, that alarms of fire have been wantonly raised by a set of fast young men, who infest our streets, when honest people should be in their beds. We see no way to redress this grievance, unless access to the use of the bells is forbidden to all, except authorized agents employed for that purpose, whose residences should be in the vicinity of their calling. We know it is hard to be broke of our slumbers and called out into the night air to find that we have been made the butt of some practical joker. But this is a joking world, and we must rub through it the best way we can.

HOGGON'S NECK. This popular resort, so convenient to the town, furnishes a very pleasant ride on a summer's day. From the square, it may be reached in thirty minutes with a quick team, over a pleasant road, interspersed with bold and interesting scenery. Hoggon's Neck, is a tongue of land, extending far into the harbor, affording a most extensive sea-view. On a late visit to the spot, we found quite an encampment of our pleasure loving citizens, with their families, who had pitched their tents on a bold promontory, washed with the waters of the ocean, commanding a fine prospect of our island harbor, to luxuriate on the bounties of the deep, in a truly gipsy manner. When we arrived, all was bustle within doors, as if some important event was on the tapis, which was revealed on reaching the beach, where we found the men hard at work, throwing out from their sandy-beds, fine white-shelled clams, intended for a rich and savory Chowder. We did not stay to the repast, but were assured that it was a model one, and bountiful enough for the entertainment of a large number of invited guests.

Friend Meers still continues at his old quarters—and we are pleased to learn that he is well patronized.

MOONLIGHT EXCURSIONS. We have had two during this week, one on Tuesday evening, by the Nelly Baker, Captain Calden, accompanied by the Weymouth Band, and another on Thursday evening by the steamer Bay View, Capt. Geyer, attended by the Quincy Brass Band. Both excursions were well patronized, and from what we can learn, gave general satisfaction.

IT NEVER FAILS.—Redding's Russian Salve never fails to cure cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, coros, bunions, sores, wounds, etc., if liberally used. Sold for 25 cents a box at all Drug stores.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, AUGUST 2, 1860.

Business.—Summer Travelling.—Increase of Building in Boston.—Boats and Shoes made by Steam.—"Roarbacks" about the Presidential Election.—Fibs of the Newspapers.—A Guess about Judge Douglas's prospects; his popularity.

Many branches of business are quiet here, and will continue so, until Dog-Days are over. No small portion of our citizens are away, seeking pleasure or for recreation in all parts of New England, &c. A journey to Saratoga from Boston is but the space of one day. A trip to New York, distant two hundred and twenty miles, is achieved in eight hours ride from hence. Montreal is but a goodly day's ride from our city, and the banks of the Mississippi can be reached in sixty hours from Boston. Even New Orleans, fifteen hundred miles distant, is accessible from many parts of New England by rail-car in five days. Who would not travel if they could command money and time? To see all the world and the "rest of mankind," in a short space of time. It is evident we shall have a business re-action by early autumn. The signs are unmistakable. At the present moment, we are advised that business is good in New York; we shall soon feel its influence here, for the two cities are united together for many purposes, like the Siamese Twins. Mechanical pursuits are thriving, judging from the Evening Transcript, which says, (and we hope it is true) that no season in this city has witnessed so many expensive buildings begun, or for which contracts have been made, as the present. The addition to the value of the real estate in Boston from the erection or commencement of costly structures, either for trading purposes or private residences during the present season, can not be less than $5,000,000. This is exerting a salutary influence on the granite business.

The manufacturers of boots and shoes, have all kinds of luck, and experienced great fluctuations the present year. The leather business is one of the largest branches of enterprise in the United States, and whatever may be its ups and downs, will continue inevitably to be the largest.

Manual labor is likely to be superseded by steam for a story is going the rounds in the newspapers that a Steam Shoe Factory is in full operation on Saxton's river, Vermont, owned by D. F. Murphy, Esq., of Boston; where all the hand labor used about a shoe is in the rollers on the uppers. The soles are cut, rolled,

They are blocked, polished and pegged by machinery. They are also bound, stitched, punched and sand-papered by machinery. The establishment contains room for four hundred hands, none of whom require any of the old familiar tools, or the shoe-bench. The goods, however, are said to cost full as much as those made by hand-labor, but the style and finish are far superior to hand-work.

No reliance can be placed from newspaper intelligence, as to the true state of the Presidential question. The Republican press, consider the election of Lincoln sure. They claim all the Free States for him. They have to make immense gains over the election of 1856 even to hope for success. Mr. Lincoln is a good man, but there is no enthusiasm—no steam up, as in 1856 toward Colonel Fremont. Then the popular vote of the Republican party, fell short of a third of all that was thrown. Will they do any better in November? One day we hear that the South with her one hundred and twenty electoral votes is sure for Breckinridge; the next day it is to be a divided vote between Bell and Breckinridge—Mr. Douglas not being known as a candidate in the slave-holding States. Anon, it is blazed in the presses favorable to Mr. Douglas, that he is to carry Maine, New York, the Great Northwest, and about all the Southern States. Bell is to take New Jersey, and if he is a very good boy, perchance Tennessee, also. Old Sam Houston, is to have Texas any how, from matters of State pride. Such are the conflicting and foolish views, sent out every day in the partisan newspapers. The most impartial and dispassionate view that now can be taken of the ensuing National election, is, that in the multiplicity of candidates there will be no choice by the people. The next view, that Lincoln's chance, with his party a unit for him, is the best. The vote of most of the non-slaveholding States, is to be divided between him and Judge Douglas.

As the State elections transpire, they will develop the popular feeling better than is now known towards the competitors of Mr. Lincoln. Exercising the Yankee privilege of guessing—the popular vote on Judge Douglas in extent, will astonish the whole country. Kentucky and Missouri next week will put the ball in motion for him. The Douglas candidate for Governor, in Maine, will come so close to an election, that the Democrats will have great hopes of giving that State to Douglas in November. The chances of the little giant for the Presidency strengthen every day—for the people are for him—organizations and party cliques are against him. But from present appearances the American people are about to take the election of President in their own hands, paying little regard to the nominations already made for the Presidency. The triumphant movements of Judge Douglas every where in New England, the people rallying by thousands and tens of thousands to welcome him, is a harbinger of his strength. No public man since the days of Andrew Jackson, has been received in New England by the great body of the people, with the enthusiasm, that has met Judge Douglas at every place he has visited.

Dr. Holmes' Address.

MR. EDITOR:—At the last annual meeting of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the address was by Oliver Wendell Holmes, a professor, as your readers well know, of the Harvard Medical School. The professor thought that after all had been said about reducing the doses, there was altogether too much medicine given by the doctors, at present.

He said, "I firmly believe that if the whole Materia Medica, as now used, could be sunk to the bottom of the sea, it would be all the better for mankind, and all the worse for the fishes!" A few years ago, this same professor was accustomed to dose his patients with enormous doses of poisonous drugs, as he acknowledges, and he was also unsparing in abusing the Homoeopaths.

In another part of the Address, he thought his "chance of recovery from illness less, with Hippocrates for his physician and Miss Gamp for his nurse, than if he were in the hands of Hahnemann himself, with Florence Nightingale, or good Rebecca Taylor to care for him."

It also appears, that the honorable gentlemen of Allopathic society rather disliked to be called barbarians, and they did not even thank Dr. Holmes for his advice, which was virtually, that the Allopaths had better adopt some of the leading principles of Homoeopaths. Verily, the old temples of Esculapius are in rather a dilapidated condition.

In relation to the Address the society adopted the following resolution:

Resolved:—"That the society disclaim all responsibility for the sentiments contained in the annual Address."

[By request.]
Visit to the Mother of Stephen A. Douglas

Passing a day here, I was glad to accept the offer by a resident of the village to an introduction to the family of Hezekiah Granger. Mr. Granger many years ago married the widow of Mr. Douglas, of Brandon, (Vt.) and the mother of Stephen A. Douglas, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency.

The residence of the venerable but most agreeable couple lies about two miles South of the Clifton Springs Hotel. Of the many elegant farm houses of Ontario County, that of Mr. Granger will rank among the first. It is just such a picture of rural quiet and elegance that poets have celebrated in verse; that dramatists have painted to my lady love in the play, and denizens of cities envy so often as they pass, and think of the inmates as those who have nothing left to sigh for.

"What is the world to them, Its pomp, its pleasures, and its nonsense all?" The young consists of Mr. and Mrs. Granger, the son, Julius N. Granger, Esq., and his wife. An unusual relationship exists between the older and the younger married couples. The elder Granger married the mother of his son's wife, the latter being the only sister of Stephen A. Douglas.

The neatness and elegance of the residence outside, and the grounds are well reflected by the taste and order which prevail within.

The first of the household to meet us was the youngest Mrs. Granger. She is a lady of some forty years, accomplished, and of intelligent and agreeable discourse.

Mrs. Granger, the mother of Mr. Douglas, is a very active, sprightly and intelligent lady. She told me she was over seventy; had I guessed her age from appearance and conversation, I should have said at least fifteen years younger. In height she is not over five feet, and probably weighs less than one hundred pounds. She said she expected Stephen almost every train, but that it was altogether uncertain when he would come. Two years ago, said she, when we did not look for him, he dropped in on us and made a long visit. He never writes when we may expect him. She expressed considerable fear of the Senator's throat disease, and, mother like, appeared far more concerned about that than his political prospects.

Of one thing she felt entirely sure, that to be beaten would not hurt her son at all; and speaking of attacks upon him, she good-naturedly remarked, she thought the newspapers had already said all the harsh things they could say of him, so his running for the Presidency now could make no difference about that.

Mr. Granger, the step-father of Mr. Douglas, is a tall, erect old gentleman, of eighty years. With the exception of being a little deaf, he is in the enjoyment of every faculty. He came here from Suffield, (Conn.) in 1800, and purchased the noble farm, (then a wilderness) on which he now lives. Himself and family enjoy the esteem and love of all their neighbors.—Correspondence Troy Whig.

TIME ALTERED on the O. C. & F. R. Railroad which will be duly noticed in our next.

For the Patriot.
The Visit.

MR. EDITOR: As the Prince of Wales—his apparent to the British Throne—is soon to visit the States, would not the time be profitably employed by conferring with the young gentleman, in regard to the future policy of the two nations. The Canada, it has been creditably affirmed, are of no pecuniary advantage to the Mother Country; on the contrary, a heavy loss; that she keeps them in reserve, merely for future contingencies. We could afford to purchase them, at most any price, if she would take her pay in cotton. To us, their possession would be of incalculable advantage. It would shut out forever, a foreign power from a high road into the very heart of the nation; bring into the American fold a people, who, politically, are now estranged from us; and reclaim a land, which is carrying civil war and insurrection, through her emissaries, into every section of the Union. The South, by herself, could afford to foot the bill; as it would put a stop to further colonization of run-away negroes, and travel on under-ground railroads. She will never enjoy perfect peace and security in her domestic relations, until every vestige of foreign influence is closed upon her from the North.

The Excursion of the pupils of Messrs. Duncan and Morse's schools, to Nahant, on Friday of last week, in the steamer Nelly Baker, Captain Calden, is spoken of as a very pleasant affair. The youthful party were much gratified, the trip affording them a rich fund of amusement. Every thing passed off merrily—there was nothing to regret, except a little incident which happened at the close of the day. A part of the company became estranged from the rest, and in the attractions of the place, forgot in their enthusiasm, the hour on which the steamer left—subjecting them to the inconvenience of waiting for the evening boat, due the city, and then seeking their homes by railroad—which they reached, without any other mishap, about half past nine.

FIRE. An alarm of fire was raised on Wednesday evening. Our Fire Companies promptly responded to the alarm, and proceeded a good way toward Neponset, when they concluded it was best to retrace their steps. The cause of the alarm originated in the destruction of a barn and five tons of hay at the Five Corners, in Dorchester.

THE ECONOMY OF HEALTH. This busy nation of Americans have 12,000,000 working people, whose services may be estimated at $20 a day, or their annual loss by sickness at an average of ten days in each year.—This gives a total loss of $240,000,000, a sum three times as large as the whole cost of the General Government, including the Army, Navy, Post Offices, Legislators, Foreign Ministers and all. The amount weighs over six hundred tons in pure gold.

A large proportion of this costly suffering might be averted by attention to diet, cleanliness, and above all, by the proper use of the right remedy in season. When a 25 cent box of Ayer's Pills will avert an attack of illness which it would take several days to recover from, or a dollar bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, will expel a lurking disorder that would bring the sufferer to his back for weeks or months, does it take any figures to show the good economy of the investment? When Fever and Ague is ranking in your veins, and shaking your life out of you, is it worth the dollar it costs for his Ager Cure to have the villainous disorder expelled, which it does surely and quickly? When you have taken a cold is it prudent to wait until it has settled on the lungs, when days or weeks or months must be spent in trying to cure it, even if it can be cured at all, or is it cheaper to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, costing a few shillings, and remove the trouble before it is serious? It takes no wisdom to decide.

A GREAT BLESSING TO THE AFFLICTED. Dr. M. Lane, the inventor of the celebrated Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburg, Pa., used these pills for several years in his practice, before he could be induced to offer them to the public in such a manner as to make them known throughout the country. This learned physician felt the same repugnance that all high-minded men of science feel in entering the lists against those unscrupulous empirics who obtrude their nostrums upon the public, and rely upon a system of puffing to sustain them.—Convinced, however, of the value of the Liver Pills and influenced by the plain dictates of duty, the doctor finally authorized Fleming Bros., of Pittsburg, Pa., who are now the sole proprietors, to manufacture and place them before the public. This great medicine has not disappointed the expectations of his friends, the medical faculty, at whose instance he was induced to place them before the public in their present popular form. From every quarter do we hear the most gratifying accounts of their wonderful curative effects—the East and the West, the North and the South, are alike laden with "tidings of great joy" from the afflicted. These wonderful Pills have completely conquered that great scourge of America, the Liver Complaint.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M. Lane's celebrated Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburg, Pa. All other Liver Pills in comparison are worthless. Dr. M. Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

The Bachelor's Dream.

BY THOMAS HOOD.

My pipe is lit, my glass is mixed,
My curtain drawn, and all is snug,
Old Fuss is in her elbow chair,
And Trudy is sitting on the rug.
Last night I had a curious dream,
Miss Susan Bates was Mistress Mogg—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

She looked so fair, she sang so well,
I could but woo, and she was won;
Myself in blue, the bride in white,
The ring was placed, the deed was done,
Away we went in chaise and four,
As fast as grinning boys could fling—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

What loving tele-grams to come!
What tele-grams must still defer?
When Susan came to live with me,
Her mother came to live with her,
With sister Bell she couldn't part,
But all my time had leave to jog—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

The mother brought a Pretty Poll—
A monkey, too, what work he made!
The sister introduced a beau—
My Susan brought a favorite maid.
She had a tallow of her own—
A snappish mongrel christened Gog—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

The monkey bit, the parrot screamed,
All day the sister screamed and sung;
The petted maid was such a scold!
My Susan learned to use her tongue;
Her mother had such wretched health,
She sat and croaked like any frog—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

No longer Deary, Duck, and Love,
I soon came down to simple "M"—
The very servants crossed my wish,
My Susan let me down in them.
The poker hardly warmed my own,
I might as well have been a log—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

My clothes they were the queerest shape!
Such coats and hats she never met!
My ways, they were the oddest ways,
My friends were such a vulgar set!
Poor Tomkinson was enabled and huffed,
She could not bear that Mister Hegg—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

At times we had a spar, and then
Mamma must mingle in the song—
The sister took a sister's part—
The maid declared her master wrong—
The parrot learned to call me "Fool!"
My life was like a London fog—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

My Susan's taste was so superior,
As proved by bills that had no end;
I never had a decent coat—
I never had a coin to spend!
She forced me to resign my club,
Lay down my pipe, retrench my grog—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

Each Sunday night we gave a rout,
To fops and dits, a pretty set;
And when I tried to steal away,
I found my stout full of whist!
Then first to come, and last to go,
There always was a captain Hogg—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

Now was not that an awful dream
For one who single is and snug—
With Pussy in the elbow chair,
And Trudy reposing on the rug—
If I must totter down the hill,
Tis safest done without a clog—
What d'ye think of that, my cat?
What d'ye think of that, my dog?

To the Prodigal Son.

Brother hast thou wandered far
From thy father's happy home,
With thyself and God at war?
Turn thee, brother, homeward come.

Hast thou wasted all the powers
God for noble uses gave?
Squandered life's most golden hours?
Turn thee, brother, God can save!

Is a mighty famine now
In thy heart and in thy soul?
Discontent upon thy brow?
Turn thee, God will make thee whole!

Fall before him on the ground,
Pour thy sorrow in his ear;
Seek him while he may be found;
Call upon him—he is near.

Anecdotes.

My dear doctor, said a lady, I suffer a great deal with my eyes.
Be patient, madam, he replied, you would probably suffer a great deal more without them.

Dawker, Dawker, said an exquisite, I want you to tell me what I can put into my head to make it right?
It wants nothing but brains, said the physician.

Ain't you afraid you will break while falling so? said a chap in the pit of a circus, to the clown.
Why so? asked the clown.
Because you are a tumbler, cried the wag.

Sir, said a pompous personage, who once undertook to bully an editor, do you know that I take your paper?
I have no doubt you take it, replied the man of the quill; for several of my honest subscribers have been complaining lately about their papers being missing in the morning.

A red-nosed gentleman asked a wit whether he believed in spirits.
"Ay, sir," replied he, looking him full in the face, "I see too much evidence before me to doubt that."

PACKARD'S Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

Now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 30, 1859.
MR. PACKARD—Sir:—I have given your Regenerator a fair trial and find it all you claim for it. My hair was very gray; it is now restored to perfect color. All the humor is removed from the scalp. In short, I have now a perfect head of hair. I am willing to bet before you Justice of the Peace and make oath to the above, if you wish it.
E. BIRD.
What it has done for him it will do for everybody that will use it.

MRS. E. HAYDEN, Agent for Quincy.
Also, for sale by C. C. JOHNSON.

Mr. Lincoln and the Colored Folks.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BOSTON COURIER:

In confirmation of the probable truth of the COURIER's statement respecting Mr. LINCOLN, I send you the following extracts from his speeches, which met my eye in running over the volume of "Joint Debates of Douglas and Lincoln," sold by A. Williams & Co., Boston:

"I have said that I do not understand the Declaration to mean that all men were created equal in all respects. Certainly the negro is not our equal in color—perhaps not in many other respects"—Page 63.

"What next? Free them, and make them socially and politically our equals? My own feelings will not admit of this. * * We cannot make them equals."—Page 74.

"Our opinion is that it would be best for all concerned to have the colored population all in a State by themselves. In this I agree."—Page 125.

"I will say, then, I am not and never have been in favor of making voters or jurors of negroes; nor of qualifying them to hold office, nor to intermarry with whites; and I will say farther in addition to this, that there is a physical difference between the black and white races, which I believe will forever forbid the two races living together on terms of social and political equality."—Pp. 136, 193.

"I agree with Judge Douglas that he (the negro) is not my equal in many respects, certainly not in color—perhaps not in intellectual and moral endowments."—P. 75 ["White is a good color."—South Boston Democratic motto.]

"In that contest I did not at any time say I was in favor of negro suffrage, twice—once substantially, and once expressly, I declared against it."

"I have no purpose to introduce political and social equality between the white and black races."—P. 194.

"I tell them very frankly, I am not in favor of negro citizenship."—P. 157.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, August 11th, 1860.

'BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.'

SUMMER AMUSEMENTS—PIC-NICS, ETC.

If we cannot follow the example of the magnets of society, in a trip to Newport or other places of artificial refinement, we can, in a more humble way, spend a day at Abington, or on the sea shore, much to our profit and physical improvement, and at a small draft on our finances. The pupils of the Universalist Sunday School, of this town, made their annual excursion, on Wednesday, in a Pick-Nickian way, to the celebrated Grove in Abington. The party, before it took the cars, numbered about five hundred, and as a musical escort, were accompanied by the Quincy Brass Band. The weather was fine, though sultry and hot; an escape, therefore, from the dusty, heated thoroughfares was temptingly inviting. Such recreations are healthy to both mind and body. The teachings are all true to Nature. One such lesson, is worth scores drawn from moth-eaten parchments, of dry and dusty creeds. Sectarianism in this school has no chance to make proselytes.

EXCURSION. The St. Patrick's Society and the St. John's and St. Mary's Sunday Schools, of this town, will make an excursion to Plympton, on Thursday next. This is a new resort—nevertheless, an interesting one. Plympton is some twenty miles from here, and affords a very agreeable ride. It has an extensive lake of fresh water, skirted with rich meadows, fine shady groves, and well stocked with fish. We wish our Catholic friends a pleasant time.

GRAND EXCURSION AMONG THE ISLANDS

by day-light, for the accommodation of families. The favorite little steamer, Nelly Baker, Capt. A. W. Calden, has been chartered for the occasion, and will leave Quincy Point, on Monday next, at 10 1/2 o'clock, on a pleasure tour among the islands in our harbor—stop at Nahant—allowing a recess of three hours—and on her return trip, touch at Long Island—visit the city, and reach home at early twilight. We have had a number of moonlight excursions, but a wish has been expressed to have one arranged for the day. Accordingly, some of our most enterprising citizens have taken the matter in hand. The Nelly Baker has been engaged—a safe boat, with fine accommodations, and most excellent officers. Under such auspices, with every care taken to secure the comfort and pleasure of the company, the excursion cannot fail of being delightful. Those, therefore, who value health, and would familiarize themselves with the rich scenery with which our harbor abounds; or families, who have children pining for the fresh air—bring them out—let them breathe the pure breath of old ocean for one day; it may be your last chance.

COOKE'S ROYAL CIRCUS AND AMPHITHEATRE

under the combined management of Cooke, Barnum, and Adams, will visit this place on the 21st of the present month. This favorite establishment with the public, has made, within the past year, large additions to its former attractions. The Equestrian Troupe is said to be unrivalled. Among the Artists—the graceful Ella Zoyara; the daring and reckless bare-back rider, James Robinson; the dramatic rider, Signor Sebastian; little Ida, the charming child rider, and Monsieur Le Bach, the graceful and finished Parisian Equestrian, are all spoken of in high terms of excellence. In the Zoological department, 'Old Grizzly Adams,' as he is familiarly called, whose prowess as a trapper, and courage and intrepidity in capturing and subduing the most ferocious denizens of our forest, perhaps stands unrivalled in his profession; by the indomitable energy of his will, he can subdue the most refractory to pacific submission; causing them to dance, lie down, turn summersets, and follow him round with the docility of a spaniel. Bruin, the old man's pet, are in his presence, disarmed of their ferocity. The old veteran has seen much of forest life, and has many hair-breath escapes and strange adventures to relate. As a whole, this Circus has strong claims on the public patronage, furnishing a rich fund of rational and instructive amusement. See their card in another column.

HOT WEATHER. Wednesday was the hottest day of the season. The thermometer, at different localities in this town, ranged between ninety-five and one hundred degrees. The heat was so excessive, that many deaths, from sun-stroke, are reported in the city; the venerable porter, of Potter & White, publishers, fell a victim. In the afternoon, a dark cloud arose from the north-west, and soon the parched earth was made glad with refreshing showers; during the storm, the artillery of heaven was in full blaze; the dwelling of Charles N. Hunt, on Coddington street, was struck, the shingles scattered, a few panes of glass broken, but no other damage was sustained. In Cambridge, and other places, the storm appears to have been more violent; much property was injured, but providentially no lives were lost.

Triennial Catalogue of Harvard University for 1860.

The Triennial Catalogue of Harvard University, issued on Commencement Day last, is a welcome visitor to the literary portion of our community. We, through the kindness of a friend, have received a copy. The Catalogue has reached a ponderous octavo volume of one hundred and fifty pages, with the same arrangement as its predecessor, issued in 1857. The first graduate class was in 1642, being nine in number, including five settled ministers. In 1643, but four were graduated—three being ministers; and in 1644, none received a degree. The class of 1860 was the largest that ever graduated, being one hundred and two in number. The whole number presented for examination as the entire class of 1860, was one hundred and thirty-nine. Among the number, is George Washington, from Virginia, descended from a brother of the Father of his Country, and by a singular coincidence, born on the 22d day of February. One is from Texas. There is also one from Arkansas, and many others from distant States. One of the Freshmen Class, is a son of the Hon. Abraham Lincoln. The whole number in the Catalogue on whom degrees have been conferred is 9543. E vivis cessant stelligeri, 5386. Now living 4157. Hon. Josiah Quincy appears the oldest of the living alumni, graduated with Judge Thomas B. Adams, Judge Crafts of Vermont, Dr. Wm. Ingalls of Boston, Rev. Dr. Gray of Roxbury, and thirty-eight others in the class of 1790; none appear to be living of the classes of 1791 and 1792. Hon. Samuel Thatcher is the only survivor of the graduates of 1793. All have passed away of the class of 1794. The survivor of the class of 1795 is Rev. Caleb Bradley. Of 1796 Henry Abbot, Samuel Dana and James Jackson alone are living. The graduating class of 1797, was fifty-four, five are not starred; Horatio Binney, Samuel Farrer, Rev. Dr. Wm. Jenks, Thomas Jewett and Daniel A. White. Of the class of 1798, Isaac Fisk, Humphrey Devereux, Matthias Spaulding, Richard Sullivan and William Williams, are living. At the closing year of the last century, forty-four were graduated, of whom are living, William Hall, Humphrey Moore, Samuel Dunn Parker, Wm. H. Sumner and Samuel Swan. In running our eye over a range of two centuries, we find the Catalogue from beginning to end full of eminent names. Among the graduates of 1649, were John Rogers and Urianus Oakes, both presidents of Harvard College. In 1650, Governor Wm. Stoughton and Leonard Hoar were among the graduates. Samuel Willard in 1659. Gen. Dudley, of New Hampshire, in 1665. Judge Sewall in 1671. Governor Belcher and Edmund Quincy, in 1699; being the first of five Edmund Quincys graduated at Cambridge. Edward Holyoke in 1705. Rev. John Hancock in 1719. Gov. Wm. Ellery in 1722. Gov. Jonathan Trumbull in 1727. Gov. Belcher in 1728. Gov. Samuel Adams in 1740. Gov. Bowdoin in 1745. Robert Treat Paine in 1749. Gov. Hancock in 1754. President John Adams in 1755. Mr. Adams' class is peculiarly distinguished. It numbered but twenty-four; eight of whom became settled ministers; among his class-mates, also, were Governor Wm. Brown, of Bermuda, Governor John Wentworth, Judge David Sewall and Samuel Locke, afterwards president of Harvard College. The members of his class were remarkable for longevity; fifteen reached well into the nineteenth century; Charles Cushing died in 1810, Gov. Brown in 1802, Gov. Wentworth in 1820, Rev. Francis Gardner in 1814, Judge Sewall in 1825, Hon. Tristram Dalton in 1817, Mr. Whittemore in 1818, ex-President Adams in 1826. The average duration of life in this class is within a small fraction of forty-three years. Who can doubt that these twenty-four, when young men, possessed good habits, and no small vigor of constitution. Nearly half of this class, had lived to eminence and fame over fifty years,—before the silver cord was loosed or the golden bowl of life broken. Among the graduates in 1759, we find the distinguished names of Governor Trumbull and Paine Wingate. In 1760, Hon. John Lowell. In 1763, Timothy Pickering. In 1766, Sir Wm. Pepperell. In 1767, Increase Sumner. In 1783, Judge John Davis and Samuel Dexter. In 1789, Hon. Harrison Gray Otis and Judge Spencer of New York. In 1787, Hon. John Quincy Adams; among whose class-mates, we find chronicled, the well-known names of Abiel Abbot, D. D., Thaddeus Mason Harris, D. D., Hon. James Lloyd, Judge Samuel Putnam, Dr. Isaac Royce, of Boston, Rev. Peter Eaton, D. D., Hezekiah Packard, D. D., and others. In 1789, among the graduates were Hon. Charles Cutts and President Kirkland. Emerging into the present century, we find Chief Justice Shaw, a graduate of 1800. President Allen, of Dartmouth College, Gov. Levi Lincoln, Samuel Hoar and other eminent men in 1802. Judge Pitman, and Alexander H. Everett in 1806. Rev. T. B. Gannett, in 1809. Edward Everett in 1811. Prescott, the Historian, in 1814—also Rev. Dr. Walker. Jared Sparks, in 1815. George Bancroft and Caleb Cushing, in 1817.

But here we must cease for want of space.

From an examination of our College Catalogues, it is evident that although the laurels of the Alma Mater, are not sure evidences of talents and worth, a collegiate course for the young men of our country, seems almost a necessary pathway to honor and distinction, in the severe mental discipline it imparts, and the broad foundations that are laid for intellectual greatness.

For the Patriot.

A Nuisance.

MR. EDITOR: Much has been written, preached and sung, of the duty of a people to preserve cleanliness and order in their public walks and highways. But of what avail is such teachings, if the filthy sinks of every manufacturing are allowed to be turned upon them? Passing the tannery, of Mr. W., on Hancock street, one day the past week, we were nearly suffocated by a horrid stench proceeding from a small enclosure attached to the premises. Enquiring the cause, we learned that it arose from a quantity of old, rotten and decayed peltries, which had been taken from a putrid liquid, stretched upon a rickety frame-work, then pushed as far as possible under the nose of the public, and there left to dry; poisoning the surrounding atmosphere with their pestilential effluvia. If the interests of the community were consulted, we should think a more retired spot might be selected for such exhibitions. We question the right of any man, no matter what his position in society may be, to thus recklessly trifle with the health of his neighbors. We have heard many complaints, from the residents up town, and should think there would be more of them. But we don't know that we have cause to find fault, since those who reside in the neighborhood, have permitted the nuisance to be thrust to the very thresholds of their dwellings, without a murmur or complaint.

FRANKLIN STREET.

THE NEW CEMETERY.

HAVING recently a convenient opportunity we took a pleasant walk in this young, but destined to be a beautiful Cemetery, and were taken quite by surprise on beholding the good work that has been accomplished the present season. It is well known to our citizens that at the last annual March meeting, the town voted to appropriate five hundred dollars towards improving the ground that is to be, sooner or later, to the most of us, the final resting place of all that is mortal. The Selectmen were so to this work, and we are happy to say that it has been faithfully attended to. Several hundred forest trees of different kinds have been transplanted to this lovely spot, which look, with scarcely a single exception, in a very healthy and thrifty condition. The old vry-ponds have been altered so as to be hardly known—one is made in a splendid circle, the other is oval, or having much the appearance of an egg—and the banks around both are beautifully grass-ed.

It is not five years till the first of November next, since this ground was consecrated by appropriate exercises, and if the noble work, that has so recently commenced, continues but a few years longer, we shall have in Quincy, the renowned place of illustrious men, a cemetery that will compare favorably with any in New England,—Mount Auburn not excepted.

Rev. Mr. Lothrop will preach in the Stone Temple tomorrow.

OUTRAGEOUS ASSAULT. As a young lady, named Miss Simonds, a resident of Braintree, was returning home on Sunday evening last, from South Weymouth, where she had been on a visit to her Aunt, she was assaulted by two young men who attempted to violate her person. After the attempt they threw her into the Weymouth pond and left her. She barely escaped being drowned and was found the next morning in nearly an insensible condition. One of the men has been arrested.

ANOTHER CASE OF FEVER AND AGUE CURIED. A few weeks ago we recorded an astonishing cure of Fever and Ague by the use of Dr. M'Lane's Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburg, Pa. We have now another to mention, viz: that of Mr. James Sharpe of Madisonburg, who states that he had labored under a very severe attack of Ague and Fever, and was soon restored by the use of these Pills. Mr. Sharpe also expresses an opinion, founded on observation, that the Liver Pills are the best for bilious complaints ever offered in his section of country.

Although long known as a sovereign remedy for chronic cases of Hepatic derangement, or diseases of the Liver, the proprietors, Fleming Bros., of M'Lane's Pills, were not prepared for the frequent but gratifying evidences of its general utility and curative capacity. In this respect, this invaluable medicine has exceeded their most sanguine expectations, and induced them to hope that it will be introduced into every family in the United States.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's celebrated Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburg, Pa. All other Liver Pills in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

"My Times are in Thy Hands."

PSALM 31: 15.

Father, I know that all my life
Is portioned out for me;
And the changes that are sure to come,
I do not fear to see:
But I ask Thee for a present mind
Intent on pleasing Thee.

I ask Thee for a thankful love,
Through constant watching wise,
To meet the glad with joyful smiles,
And to wipe the weeping eyes,
And a heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathize.

I would not have the restless will
That hurries to and fro,
Or secret thing to do,
I would be dealt with as a child,
And guided where to go.

Wherever in the world I am,
In whatever's estate,
I have a fellowship with hearts
To keep and cultivate;
And a work of love to do,
For the Lord on whom I wait.

I ask Thee for the daily strength,
To none that ask desists;
And a mind to blend with outward life,
While keeping at its side,
Content to fill a little space,
If Thou be glorified.

And if some things I do not ask,
In my cup of blessing be,
I would have my spirit filled the more
With grateful love to Thee—
More careful than to serve Thee much,
To please Thee perfectly.

There are briars besetting every path,
That call for patient care;
There is a crook in every lot,
And a need for earnest prayer,
But a lowly heart that leans on Thee,
Is happy everywhere.

In a service that Thy love appoints,
There are no days for me;
For my secret heart is taught the truth
That makes Thy children "free,"
And a life of self-reconciling love
Is a life of liberty.

On the Water

On the water, on the water,
While the summer dews were fair,
Whispering words in soft accents
Thro' a veil of drooping hair;
While the little car was peeping,
Half-shaded and shy red,
Blushing at the earnest turning
Of the tender words I said—

On the water, on the water,
Fairly shone the sunbeams then,
Dancing on the tiny ripples,
Lighting up the far off gleam;
None could hear us save the liss,
Swaying in her golden pride,
And the lilies ever moving
With the motion of the tide.

On the water, on the water,
While the twilight shadows drew nigh,
Catching at the drooping branches,
As we floated idly by;
Oh! her small hand's gentle pressure,
And her glance all words above,
And her soft cheeks' bright carnation,
While I told her all my love.

On the water, on the water,
Now I float, but all alone,
And I miss the silken ringlets,
And the little hand that went;
Dies the sunset's crimson beauty,
Comes the twilight as of yore,
All remind me of the dear one,
Lost to me for evermore.

Our Revolutionary Veterans

Our Patriot Fathers! where are they?
Where is that holy band,
Who stood in fearless, firm array,
Through all the long and stormy day
Of war and blood, the hope and stay
Of our beloved land?

Who nobly in the darkest hour
Sustained the patriot's part—
Led onward by the soul of time,
The master spirit of the hour,
Whose name shall live in every clime
Where beats a freeman's heart.

Oh! where are they who prized their rights
Above all things but life?
Indignant spurned a tyrant's sway,
And woke the dawn of Freedom's day;
Their watchword through the deadly fray
Still—Liberty or Death!

Ah! few among the honored brave
Are left us on the earth!
But though our gallant sires depart,
Columbia's sons in hand and heart,
When called to act the Patriot's part,
Will never shame their birth!

And as revolving ages find
Our country great and free—
Long as her sun-bright mountains stand
Through all this fair and happy land,
The memory of that glorious band
Our beacon light shall be!

Anecdotes.

A gentleman lately complimented a lady on her approved appearance.
You are guilty of flattery, said the lady.
Not so, replied he, for I vow you are as plump as a partridge.

At first, said the lady, I thought you guilty of flattery only, but now you are actually making game of me.

A lawyer engaged in a case, tormented a witness so much with questions that the poor fellow at length cried for water.
There, said the Judge, I thought you'd pump him dry.

A choemaker was taken up for bigamy.
Which wife asked a bystander, will he be obliged to take?
Brown, always ready at a joke, replied:
He is a cobbler, and of course must stick to the last.

DR. M'LANE'S
CELEBRATED
VERMIFUGE
LIVER PILLS.

WE beg leave to call the attention of the Trade, and more especially the Physicians of the country, to two of the most popular remedies now before the public.

We refer to
Dr. Chas. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills.

We do not recommend them as universal Cure-alls, but simply for what their name purports, viz: THE VERMIFUGE,

For expelling Worms from the human system. It has also been administered with the most satisfactory results to various Animals subject to Worms.

THE LIVER PILLS,
For the cure of LIVER COMPLAINTS, all Bilious Derangements, SICK HEAD-ACHE, &c. In cases of FEVER AND AGUE, preparatory to or after taking Quinine, they almost invariably make a speedy and permanent cure.

As specifics for the above mentioned diseases, they are Unrivaled, and never known to fail when administered in accordance with the directions.

Their unprecedented popularity has induced the proprietors, FLEMING BROTHERS,

PITTSBURGH, PA., to dispose of their Drug business, in which they have been successfully engaged for the last Twenty Years, and they will now give their undivided time and attention to their manufacture. And being determined that Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills shall continue to occupy the high position they now hold among the great remedies of the day, they will continue to spare neither time nor expense in procuring the Best and Purest material, and compound them in the most thorough manner. Address all orders to

PACKARD'S
Great Regenerator for the HUMAN HAIR.

It is now too well known to need any further recommendation from any source. Yet to satisfy the most credulous, I will publish the following testimony.

Harrison Sq., Dorchester, Mar. 20, 1

be obliged to borrow Diogenes' lantern to enable them to succeed in searching for them.

A voice I hear! Ah! good morning, sir.

Mr. C—Happy to meet you, sir.

R—How is friend John to-day, sir.

C—He is dead! Oh! I hope, I hope—

R—He's gone to the spirit land. What a happy thought that we can commune with departed spirits so dear—he to come back, yes, and talk to us. He is not dead; no, not dead.

C—How foolish; how inconsistent! As well might you strive to convince me that the world has ceased to revolve, as attempt to make me believe such nonsense—communion with the spirits.

R—Will you give your reasons for having come to such hasty conclusions.

C—Common sense teaches one different.—The majority of the people are against it. Learned men, those more able to judge than myself, pronounce it false; shall I persevere in my decision?

R—Christ, was he not persecuted, scorned, reviled, murdered? Learned men, did not they oppose him? Must there not be a beginning?

Are not all new ideas, new discoveries, which are disclosed to the people, opposed always at their birth? As regards learned men, did not the Professors of the Harvard College meet a while ago to investigate this new light? but where will you find a report of the result. You will not find a true one. They found it to be more true than they anticipated—found there was something in it, and therefore did not make a report. If they had found it to be false, a hangup, you would have seen one come out instantly, and circulated throughout the country.

C—As regards Christ, His doctrine was sure to succeed, to prevail, but where is the slightest prospect for the new light you speak of to meet with success.

R—Success! The number of Spiritualists, those who believe in spirit communion in United States, alone, are estimated at about four million! Was there ever such a success in so short a period, even when Christianity first started. Many believe in it, my friend, who dare not come out and acknowledge it—are afraid of becoming unpopular.

C—Why did not these manifestations come to us before? Why is it they have appeared at this period, particularly.

R—Spirits have communed with man in the past. The Bible, from beginning to end, is filled with incidents where departed spirits have come to earth and made themselves manifest, and in most cases conversed with man. Who appeared unto Christ when on the mount? and to Peter and John? were they not departed spirits—Moses and Elias. This is only one out of many recorded in the Bible. If they appeared then, why can they not now? The fact of their having communed with man in the past, is conclusive proof that they can come again, is it not? Is the gate shut? the avenue, as acknowledged in the Bible, closed, never to be again opened? The reason why these manifestations have not come to us before, is that people were not in proper condition to receive it; they were too bigoted. Even at present, there are many persons who have witnessed these manifestations, but they are so skeptical, so opposed to new ideas, new discoveries, that it is almost next to impossibility to convince them; and even if they become so, they dare not announce it.

C—Ah! but those spirits you speak of, as being recorded in the Bible, were Angels.

R—What are Angels? messengers from heaven to earth; yes, departed spirits, once inhabiting the earth. Find out the origin of the word Angel? Were not Moses and Elias, who appeared on the mount, once inhabitants of the earth? do you not believe the Bible? Have you ever attempted to investigate Spiritualism to ascertain for yourself whether it is true or false?

C—I have not, most assuredly. I think it is not worth investigating.

R—Is it right then to continue to condemn it, if you have not taken the trouble to look into it? Is it right to continue pronouncing those persons fools and lunatics, who have given it a thorough investigation and consequently have become convinced of the truth. I have given this subject my careful attention; have studied it as one ought, thoroughly, and will give you a few spirit manifestations, which I have witnessed, myself, and evidences of their presence while in a circle of friends. I have seen a beautiful crayon likeness, (the size) of the faces of two beautiful young ladies now dwelling in the spirit land, such a work of art as cannot be excelled, even by the greatest living master on earth, in my opinion. The medium made no professions for drawing or painting, more than what is performed at school. Yet they were exact likenesses, very natural, so pronounced by the mother. The medium had never seen the ladies while in the form, nor a daguerreotype, or any likeness of them—she saw the spirits while in a trance state, and being aided by other spirits took their portraits.—There has been many, many such cases. I have also had tests from dear friends. Have heard when in a circle the guitar played; raps on the table; ringing of the bell; all performed at the same time, no person touching either the bell or the guitar. Also have taken the guitar in hand, bore down upon it with all my might, but could not keep it down: persons weighing say two hundred pounds also took hold, they could not stop it from rising—no one else was touching it, (except spirits.) The guitar played an accompaniment to our singing, no mortal touching the instrument. Many other evidences of their presence, which occurred during my stay in the room, could be mentioned; and many other manifestations, more marvellous, perhaps, which I have witnessed at different times and places, but let this suffice for the present. These manifestations, which I have narrated, are very slight, I assure you, compared with those that many have witnessed.

C—You may have been psychologized and also those in the room with you; you imagined all this perhaps. Why come to such a hasty conclusion, that it is the spirits.

R—Friend, it is not a hasty one; I have given it a long study. It would take an immense number of words, I assure you, to describe to you the particulars why I have thus concluded.

It is very true that one cannot believe, unless they have evidence, or witness these manifestations—one must go and search for them. Mediums are the channel through which the spirits come. They cannot come through all; as the mesmerizer, he cannot get control of but few persons, the spirits cannot control but few, through which to make themselves manifest.—It is in the condition of the person. One cannot be mesmerized, magnetized, another can. Go into the public meeting; into the Town Hall, in Quincy; there, oftentimes you will listen to such discourses that even the most learned in the country cannot surpass; either in argument, in composition, or elocution. On becoming acquainted with the medium, you will ascertain in most cases, that he or she was not aware of the subject they were to discourse upon, before they entered the hall. Never have I heard of a real medium, who studied their discourse during the week. Yet these persons, many of them, before they become mediums, possessed but an ordinary education, and some considerably below ordinary. They will tell you upon inquiry that they are controlled by the spirits; they speak through them. If you become convinced that these mediums could not speak thus, in their natural state, why should you doubt their assertion.

C—In time it may be accounted for through science perhaps. Many now acknowledge sciences were at their discovery a mystery which could not be explained.

R—Call it what you may, it cannot alter facts. Spirit communion has stood the strength of time, having been recorded as far back as three or four thousand years, according to the Bible.

C—Their doctrine is very corrupt and they speak disrespectful of Christ and the Bible.

R—As regards their doctrine, the Spiritualists do not profess to have any; they simply unite in the belief of communion with the spirits, on most other points they differ somewhat. As regards the Bible, they do not believe those passages in the Old Testament which conflict with reason; they profess to teach their reason. God gave it to us to use. Many do not think that Adam and Eve were the first human beings on earth, because they cannot conceive how the seed continued to multiply, if Adam had no daughter, and even if he had, it is very natural to suppose that their children must have been tools; a brother having married a sister. Thus a race would finally become extinct; reason teaches one this. It was my privilege, a while ago, to converse with a member of Dr. Adam's Church, Boston, (Orthodox.) He was an old man, and he said that "the Bible was created in six days. His answer was that the Geologists have come to the conclusion that it was six periods, instead of six days, and he thought they were right. Hence reason must not be thrown aside. Use it, yes, use it, my friend. As regards Christ most mediums do not speak ill of him, but they do not consider him a God; they consider him a man born of woman, and Joseph as his father. Some, however, in striving to break down the old idea of his being a God, make their speech undoubtedly sound harsh to some ears—they do not understand, perhaps, their meaning. Some are of one opinion, some another; as for mine, Christ cannot be exalted to high; (I speak of him as human.) I wish for no better pattern; no better guide. His teaching, his precepts, will ever be held up for humanity to follow—to act. I feel that I cannot love him, his life, his examples, too much; but in loving him, I must act him, or else love is worthless. Faith alone, this is but a form. If you have strong faith in his precepts, his acts, you are more bound to carry them into practice—following his example. But as I look into the many churches, and behold persons professing so much and acting so little, I feel compelled to exclaim: Christians, Christians; Oh, how rare! A true Christian—a true follower of Christ—nothing is more beautiful to behold; nothing more sublime. My friend I ask you, not for my benefit but for yours, to investigate spiritualism, give it a careful study, throw aside prejudices, do not cling too tenaciously to the education of the past—let your reason be your guide. Happiness is it to me to believe in Spiritualism; happy at the thought, that my dear departed friends are around me, and are able to communicate to us. If one is about to commit a bad act, the thought of their presence is a check; but if good, we feel thankful that they can witness it. Any new light concerning the future ought to command one's careful attention—certainly it ought not to be a subject of ridicule. Continue not, my friend, to trifle with this all important subject, but give it a fair and impartial investigation. Will you?

C—I will, adieu.

Derangement of the Liver is one of the most common, as well as the most formidable of diseases known to American physicians. It had for years attracted the closest attention of the medical faculty in all parts of the United States, and yet at the time of the discovery of Dr. M. Lane's great specific, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., it was almost beyond the reach of medical skill. Thousands had perished without even a hope of relief, and although thousands may yet be destined to feel the direful effects of this most complicated disease, it is now, thanks to the search of Dr. M. Lane, most completely brought within the scope of medical control. The proprietors, Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., of the Liver Pills, feel confident that they offer a remedy which has been fully tested by time, and which has never failed of success when fairly tried.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M. Lane's celebrated Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Liver Pills in comparison are worthless.

Dr. M. Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR. Senator Seward, of New York, in his late excursion tour through the North, paid us a complimentary visit, on Monday last. He was the guest of the Hon. Charles Francis Adams; but so private were his movements, that but few of our citizens were aware of the fact. During the life time of ex-President, John Quincy Adams, whose friendship he enjoyed, he was a frequent visitor.

ON THE RAIL. Senator Douglas passed over the Old Colony road, on Monday last, en route, for Bangor, Maine. This course was recommended by his physicians. He was received—very unexpectedly—at the landing, by a numerous crowd of his partisans, with drums and fifes, and escorted to the Bangor House, where he delivered a speech, on his peculiar theme, of over an hour's duration. His next movement, it is said, will be at the South, where he intends to take the stump, and make a bold push for the White House.

THE ST. PATRICK'S SOCIETY made their excursion to Plympton, on Thursday, accompanied by the Quincy Brass Band. The company was large—eleven cars were attached to the train. They went off under a clear sky, and the good wishes of the non-partisans.

POLITICAL. It is said, by the knowing ones, that there will be but two candidates run for governor, in this State, at the fall election—Marshall P. Wilder and N. P. Banks. If that should be the case, the result would be extremely doubtful.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE. A most extraordinary case is now being tried before one of the French Courts. A certain M. C. died, leaving an express order to his heirs that he should be buried in church, and a handsome sum paid to the priests on condition that "nobody should laugh while the service was going on." The intelligent defunct had himself very often taken hilarious liberties with death, and he was determined that he would be buried with the gravity appropriate to the grave. Of course the odd request got noised abroad; all the village came to the funeral; and every body keeping an eye on everybody else to see that nobody should so much as wink, the natural result followed:

A fat priest near the coffin was the first to break down; the choir boys, in the frailty of their youth, followed the priest; the minor canons, trying to stop the choir boys, at least to make them "laugh out of the wrong side of their mouths," caught the contagion, and began to shake their sides; the deacons went off next into a full guffaw; and finally the cure himself was conquered and choked in his handkerchief. In short, a merrier interment was never witnessed. It was the joke of the season. But the heirs, not liking their sport, have refused to pay the clergy for their rollicking services, and the matter is now in court, where it will doubtless cease to be a laughing matter to anybody but the lawyers.

For the Patriot.

The Elections.

The elections which took place at the South and West, on the 6th inst., appear to have all gone in favor of the Democrats. North Carolina, Arkansas, Alabama and Texas, have opened the campaign with handsome majorities. Even Kentucky and Missouri were obliged to fight under the Democratic standard, or go into a defeat. The Know-Nothing candidate, Mr. Coombs, with his Douglas' supporters, were put upon the stand, and obliged to define their position.

"We deny the power of the people of the Territories, prior to the formation of a State Constitution, by legislation or otherwise, to impair any right which any citizen of the United States possesses under the Federal Constitution in the Territories."

And in Missouri, the Douglas candidate is made to say:

"That the Democratic party of Missouri hold these cardinal principles on the subject of slavery in the Territories: 1st. That Congress has no power to abolish slavery in the Territories. 2d. That the Territorial Legislature has no power to abolish slavery in any Territory, nor to prohibit the introduction of slaves therein, nor any power to exclude slavery therefrom by unfriendly legislation, nor any power to destroy or impair the right of property in slaves by any legislation whatever."

By such principles were these States carried; it is easy to see where they will be in the fall. The fact is, squatter sovereignty finds no favor south of Mason & Dixon's line; the whole South and West will go as a unit for Breckinridge.

Boston Correspondence

Boston, August 16, 1860.

Political Gossip.—Conjectures for what they are worth.—Lights and Shadows of Political Parties.

The Presidential question is awakening the political community. Hitherto, there has been but little enthusiasm. The Republicans say, they are sure of victory; hence no object could be gained, by the usual demonstrations, growing out of political gatherings. The chances of Mr. Lincoln are the best. Much that is now in doubt may, before the 6th of November be reduced to certainty. The State elections are they transpire, will be a significant harbinger. We have said in a former letter, that the elections in Missouri and Kentucky, would develop to some extent, party strength, having a bearing on the National election. If the cause of Mr. Douglas was unpropitious, it would remove his chances still further of success. If, on the contrary, these elections resulted in his favor, the friends of popular sovereignty would have reason to thank God and take courage. How stands the case? Kentucky has repudiated Mr. Breckinridge by thirty thousand majority. His own State has struck the first knell of his inglorious defeat; not, it is admitted by a direct Douglas' triumph, but by the Union party, so called; which looks like giving the electoral vote of "Old Kentucky" to the little giant. The Douglas party has swept Missouri. If the latest advices are true; electing their State ticket and five members of Congress. The political sentiment of Missouri, would seem a criterion of what exists in the Western States. We believe Douglas is strong there—the masses are with him. The State election in Maine, is soon to come off; it will be an indication as to the result of her vote in November next. The Republicans claim Washburn's majority for governor, at twenty thousand—a large figure. But if this should be reduced by the capriciousness of the people five thousand, with the loss of two members of Congress—a very possible contingency—Mr. Douglas might possibly get a few votes in November next for President in the State of Maine. He is on a visit to there now, to talk to the boys, on the principles of non-intervention, that have kept the Union together for nearly a century; that cultivate a fraternal feeling among citizens of all parts of our beloved country. That wages no war with the South against their domestic institutions, non-intervention, the real element of unionism, that if carried out, when this unfortunate Buchanan administration shall have closed its eyes in eternal sleep, will promote peace; and, as a result, will preserve the States of our Union, one people in the bond of American citizenship and brotherly love. Popular sovereignty constitutes peace, love and National union, in the hearts of all who are proud to call themselves citizens of the United States.

Governor Seward has made a flying visit to New England the present week, and has been well received in Boston and elsewhere, (this is right and proper, for he is the father of the present Republican party,) and if Lincoln comes in, is to be Secretary of State. He says the opposition parties to the Republican, are to get an all fired thrashing in November, and what is worse, the last Democrat is born to our country. New York he says is to give Lincoln eighty thousand plurality for President. This is tall talk for so great a statesman. But like the rest of us he must "wait for the wagon." The friends of "Old honest Abe" now, not only put down the one hundred and eighty-three electoral votes of the Free States as sure for him, but this week begin to talk about Delaware and Maryland as likely to cave in for Lincoln. There political party, will play another tune in November.

Our State election is likely to be exciting. It is probable the Bell and Everett party will put up Hon. Marshall P. Wilder for governor, giving him they think fifty thousand votes. The Breckinridge men will without doubt nominate Benjamin F. Butler for governor, by acclamation, and Whiting Griswold, stands a good chance of receiving the Douglas nomination. Governor Banks is to be nominated by the Republicans. Governor Banks and the State ticket with him will be elected. But among the councillors, senators, representatives and county officers, the struggle will be vigorous; there will be large anti-Republican gains. The two Congressional districts of Boston are in doubt. Mr. Burlingame in particular has great hopes and great fears.

HARVEST JUBILEE IN THE WEST. A gentleman who is travelling through Wisconsin, writes: I find that without exception, there is a general jubilee throughout the West on account of the abundant harvests of the present year.

CRANBERRY CROP. Notwithstanding the damage done the cranberry vine by worms and insects in certain sections of the country, the Barnstable Patriot says, "that the crop for this season will far exceed that of any former one; that Cape Cod will soon distinguish herself in the quantity and quality of this berry."

FANNY FERN.

This bold and dashing writer, who has said many good things, recently had quite an amusing adventure at one of the hotels in the city of Philadelphia.

In settling her bill, she found a charge for breaking her toilet set. She admitted the breaking of one piece, and desired to pay for that, but for no more. The price of the whole set, however, was demanded, because the set was broken. The carriage was at the door, the train was soon to start. There was no time for discussion, little for thought, but enough for action. Hastily paying the entire demand, and directing the carriage to wait a moment, she went directly back to her room, and, taking up the poker, inconspicuously broke every remaining piece in the set.

MOVEMENTS OF THE ABOLITIONISTS.—The Abolitionists are operating actively on the western border of the State of Texas. Two thousand of them are in Anderson county, inciting an insurrection among the slaves.

NO SMALL CHANGE. In the official report of the California Mint the following passage occurs, which illustrates some of the many singular phases of social life on the Pacific:

"Half dimes, three cent pieces, coppers and nickels are unknown to our commerce, and are almost unknown in our mint, although a few half dimes were once issued, to the great indignation of some people, who consider them a dangerous innovation, as having a tendency to reduce the price of labor and the profits of trade."

DENTAL. We copy the following truthful remarks concerning Dr. Brown's Artificial Teeth, from the Christian Freeman, and take pleasure in adding a mite, by saying, that the teeth we have examined, set by this skillful operator, were deserving of all the praise that has been bestowed them.

"Those who are in want of Artificial Teeth, would do well to call at the office of Dr. Ammi Brown, 24 1-2 Winter street, and examine specimens of recent Dental improvement. By his new method, the teeth and gums are made in one entire piece, with no joints or crevices for the lodgment of food, thereby securing the great desideratum, CLEANLINESS, the want of which, is often so disagreeably apparent where the common style of teeth is used. He also gives especial attention to the restoration of decayed teeth, and is generally successful in preserving and restoring to the natural shape and color such as have heretofore been condemned as useless and extracted."

"We can recommend Dr. Brown as a thorough and careful operator, and one who is willing to devote the necessary time and care to complete a piece of work which will be for the permanent benefit of his patient."

IT HOLDS ITS OWN.—Notwithstanding the publicity of an alleged remedy before the public, it is a fact that a certain "KIDNEY SALVE" grows with each season. It is an infallible remedy for cuts, bruises, burns, scalds, wounds, sores, erysipelas, etc. Get a box and try it. Only 25 cents—sold everywhere.

PRODUCTIVENESS OF THE GREAT WEST. Two tons of whortleberries were received in Chicago, on Tuesday of last week, from the western towns of Michigan.

MILITARY HONORS TO THE DEAD.

The Hancock Light Guards paid the last sad rites to the memory of a departed brother, yesterday afternoon. Capt. Charles H. Packard, an old member of the Company, was in perfect health on Monday, but was suddenly prostrated by a severe attack of Cholera, of which he died after forty-eight hours extreme suffering. The remains were removed from the late residence of the deceased, at the Point, to the Methodist Chapel, where a funeral discourse was delivered by the officiating clergyman, when, under the solemn and imposing display of a military escort, the procession moved slowly through Washington to Canal street, thence to Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The whole scene was impressive. Capt. Packard was highly esteemed as a citizen, and was thus suddenly cut off in the prime of his manhood, leaving a wife and children to mourn his loss.

Mr. John D. Wells, of Cambridge, will preach in the Stone Temple to-morrow.

EXTENSIVE CONFLAGRATION. At about 4 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, a fire was discovered in the large frame building, at South Brantree, occupied by the Old Colony Railroad Company, as a temporary depository for wood; which, with the Depot and five hundred cords of wood, were entirely consumed. The fire is thought to have originated by a spark from the engine.

Deaths.

A Complaint.

A hot noon filled the autumn sky,
So still the pure forgot to sigh,
But breathed out odors graciously
Along the slumbering air;
Sweet scents of harvest-gathered grain,
And heavy fruit that wags profane,
With dead leaves drying on the plain,
Made silence soft and rare.

There, underneath an evergreen,
Whose boughs against the hillside lean,
I impored, wrapped in thoughts serene,
Half bordering on sleep;
When gently on mine idleness
Stole a low murmur, not distress,
But monotoned to plaintiveness,
And nor enough to weep.

And thought I had a sense
Of flowers that live in innocence,
Set in far deserts for defence,
But the, ah me! alone I sprung—
Their pale lips bunched for perfume, song,
Confiding into speech their wrong,
And for that I had loved them long—
To me they made the ocean moan

First a pond-dilly said—"I die—
Who saw me? If a star should lie
In snow-flakes, were it fair as I,
Self-floated on the lake?
But I am withering in song
On the cold waters whence I sprung—
What boots it to be fair and young,
Only for being's sake?"

A purple orchid by a brook
Replied—"I see not from my nook
Aught but the summer skies, that look
Alike on bud or flower.
Now I am fading—who will know,
With grief, that from the earth I go?
Who loved me? Still the ripples flow,
And laugh from hour to hour!

And a wild rose complained of death,
That from the sweetness of her breath
But more that no clear echo saith
To clearer tones—"Farewell!"
And all the blossoms joined the plaint
Till the just murmur, and again,
Made in my ear a loud complaint,
Yet sweet as chimera's bell.

Then I made answer—"Beauty grows
For beauty's sake though no man knows
The hidden place of his repose—
It is not vain or waste.
Dear flowers! for you the wild birds sing,
Shy fawns behold your blossoming,
And poets, dreaming at your spring
Of visioned sweetness taste.

And love that lent the arching sky
Your fair creations satisfy.
Then, sliding into daylight,
Turned my anxious eyes,
And lo! the voice was silent—flowers
Stood round me, smiling as the hours,
Content enough with sun and showers—
Who mocked me with their cries?"

The Girls and Wives.

Somebody has written the following about the girls, and set it afloat:

God bless the girls,
Whose golden curls,
Blend with our evening dress,
They haunt our lives,
Like spirit wives,
Or—as nixies haunt the streams.

They soothe our pains,
They haunt our brains,
With dreams of summer hours;
God bless the girls,
God bless their curls,
God bless our human flowers.

The wives, we think, are quite as deserving of a blessing as the girls; therefore we submit the following:

God bless the wives,
They fill our lives
With little bees and honey;
They ease life's shocks,
They mend our socks,
But—don't they spend the money?

When we are sick,
They heal us quick—
That is—if they love us;
If not, we die,
And yet they cry,
And place themselves above us.

Of roguish girls,
With sunny curls,
We may in fancy dream;
But wives—true wives—
Throughout our lives
Are everything they seem.

Rest.

Not in this weary world of ours
Can perfect rest be found;
Thorax mingle with its faintest flowers,
Even on cultured ground;
Earth's pilgrim still his loins must gird
To see a lot more blest;
And this will be his onward word—
"In Heaven alone is rest!"

Anecdotes.

Will you have cat-soup? asked a pedantic gentleman of Aunt Priscilla at a dinner table.
Dear me, no, she replied, with a shudder,
I'm fond of cats in their places; but I should as soon think of eating dog-soup.

Quilp and his wife had a bit of contention.
I own you should have more brilliancy than I, said the woman, but I have the better judgment.

Yes, said Quilp, our choice in marriage shows that!

Quilp was informed that he was a brute.

Tom, do you know why they call that a weeping willow?

Poh, yes; it's 'cause they allus grow near school-houses.

My dear said a husband after a matrimonial flare-up, you'll never be permitted to enter heaven.

Why not?

Because you'll be wanted below as a tor-very well that modesty and gentleness could not be made to consist with tall foreheads or extremely broad ones! and, accordingly, without a single notable exception, their women—unless made on purpose to represent shrews and the coarser class of cyprians, have low foreheads. But nature, a higher authority, has distinguished the fairest of the sex in the same way; and foolishly perverse are they who would make themselves anew in the hope of improvement.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, September 1st, 1860.

BORN TO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

FUNERAL OF MR. SAVIL. The funeral of Mr. John Savil, took place on Monday last from his late residence, on Hancock street, under Masonic honors. The pageant was large and imposing. The Rural Lodge of this town, of which the deceased was a member, the Norfolk Union Lodge, and visitors from other kindred associations, numbering in all about one hundred, directed by Senior Grand Warden Coolidge, of the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, in full regalia, escorted the remains to the Sepulchre. The Quincy Brass Band furnished the music in a manner strikingly effective, and in harmony with the occasion. The funeral cortege, after leaving the house, passed up Washington to Temple street, thence down Temple to the Cemetery. Here a Masonic line was formed for the procession to pass through, when the coffin was taken in charge by the aged bearers, and in due order, followed by relatives and friends, (the solemnity deepened by the dirge-like strains of the Band,) proceeded toward the family vault. Before the interment, a feeling and impressive address by the Grand Warden was made, and then the remains were committed to their last resting place. Mr. Savil was one of our most aged and esteemed fellow-citizens. He had reached the green old age of nearly four score years when he was summoned to surrender his stewardship, and go hence, to receive his reward.

MISTAKE IN POLICY. By reference to Mr. Perry's Card it will be seen his property fell into dishonest hands. Some people have a curious idea in regard to such matters. They appear to think that property thus acquired may be appropriated to their own use with impunity. The fact is, however, that the law maintains that in such cases does not impair the right of the owner; on the contrary, that if the finder, after a given time, does not use suitable means to make restitution, he will be held as culpable as if it had been feloniously obtained. But where moral obligation is wanting, the precepts of Blackstone are of but little avail.

OUR MILITARY. The Fourth Regiment of Infantry, under Colonel Abner B. Packard, broke up their encampment, yesterday afternoon, after a three days' drill and discipline. The weather has been delightful throughout. Every thing passed off in the most satisfactory manner. Early on Wednesday morning, delegations from towns composing the Regiment began to arrive. The following are a list of the companies:

Co. A, of Canton, Capt. John Hall, 35 guns.
Co. B, of Easton, Capt. M. L. Williams, Jr., 40 guns.
Co. C, of Braintree, Capt. C. C. Bumpus, 41 guns.
Co. D, of Randolph, Capt. W. H. Warren, 37 guns.
Co. E, of Abington, Capt. Charles F. Alden, 38 guns.
Co. F, of Foxboro', Capt. D. L. Shepard, 43 guns.
Co. G, of Taunton, Capt. Timothy Gordon, 39 guns.
Co. H, of Quincy, Capt. T. H. Newcomb, 32 guns.
Co. I, of Hingham, Capt. J. T. Sprague, 34 guns.

Making a total of 9 companies and 339 guns.
At ten o'clock a line was formed in front of the Town Hall, and thence marched to the camp ground. Their course was greeted with the hearty welcome of our citizens, and the streets, for the time being, presented the appearance of a besieged city. The site selected for the encampment—a large plain—about a mile distant from the centre of the village, was soon stripped of its rural embellishments, and garnished with the trappings of war; tents were speedily pitched, and preparations made for a long siege. On Thursday, a review took place under Major General Andrews and Brigadier General Pierce, which attracted a large concourse of spectators. It was a spectacle which reflected much credit on both rank and file, and universally elicited the feeling, that our citizen-soldiers, in any emergency, would be found equal to the occasion. Happily, we have nothing unpleasant to record; there were incidents, however, which are inseparably connected with camp-life.

CLOTHING FOR THE MILLION. Mr. Lombard has inserted a card in our paper to-day, calling the attention of those in want of excellent made clothing, to his extensive stock. Drop in—here is a chance to secure a good bargain.

REMOVAL. Mr. Joseph Arey, has removed from his old stand, on Temple Street, to the building recently occupied by Mr. John Arnold, as a provision store. This gives Mr. A. increased facilities for his growing business, and a location, pre-eminently superior, in every respect, to the old one. The late improvements, afford two entrances on the streets, and a front which takes the eye in every direction. Mr. Arey is deserving well of the public; he is assiduous in his exertions to please; his stock of goods are fresh and new—selected with judgment and care, and are offered on as accommodating terms, for cash, as can be had at any other place in town.

LEAVE-TAKING. Gov. Banks, it is said, will withdraw from the gubernatorial honors and emoluments of this State, at the close of the present political year. Mr. B. has always had an eye to the main chance—and as politics are getting to be a drug at home—his success for the future being extremely doubtful—by an instinctive impulse, and the advice of sympathizing friends, he is about to lay aside the robes of office, for something more certain and lucrative elsewhere.—Report says, he is to receive the presidency of the Illinois and Great Western Railway, at a salary of over six thousand dollars a year—which, with fat pickings, is thought may be raised to ten thousand, at least. How some people's tastes do alter! at one time aspiring for the Presidency, and anon, accepting the office of a Railroad Manager.

FATALITY AMONG CATTLE. A singular fatality has existed among the cattle on Mount Wollaston farm, in Quincy, within a few years past, and as yet no satisfactory clue to the cause has been arrived at. During five years over sixty head of cattle have mysteriously and suddenly died upon the farm, in some instances the illness of the animal lasting less than a day. This peculiar fatality is said to be confined to this farm alone.—Boston Traveller.

I have a large number of cows on this farm, and I am trying to improve my stock by breeding from the best sources. My foreman tells me that the article has already done me some injury, which doubtless was never intended. Permit me to correct its errors in a few words. The sixty head of cattle referred to died along a period of fifteen or twenty years ago. Not one of them died on the Mount Wollaston farm. It is true that about two or three years ago, four strange horses taken to keep for a time on the premises, and one of them, died suddenly within six months of each other, in a particular pasture at Mount Wollaston. Only two of these belonged to me. The symptoms all pointed to mineral poison received in some shape or other by accident or otherwise. I have incidentally mentioned the fact in order to ascertain from others whether they had ever met with a like experience. Naturalists assure me that no vegetable matter that stock will eat in sufficient quantity to produce such immediate results can be found anywhere in these latitudes. Satisfied with this exposition, I have simply withdrawn my cattle from the particular pasture, and put them in another. I have put that pasture under cultivation, and now enjoy the promise of a very fine crop of corn: and I have had ever since, a barn full of as wholesome looking cows as those of any of my neighbors. If any body doubts, let him come and see.

Yours truly,
C. F. ADAMS.
AUCTION SALE. A large and valuable assortment of property belonging to a Livery Stable, will be offered for sale at public auction, on Friday next, Sept. 7th, at one o'clock, P. M., at the stable lately occupied by John Hardwick, on Hancock street, near the premises of Elbridge Clapp's store. The stock consists of a number of valuable horses; express wagons; common wagons; chaises; sleighs; harnesses—single and double; hay rigging, etc., etc. Here is a rare chance for "Livery Gentlemen," and all others in want of such articles, to furnish themselves. The sale will be positive. Recollect—on Friday next—and please bear in mind, at the above-named place, in order to correct the mistake of an advertisement, of the sale being held elsewhere.

MAINE LEADS IN THE UNION. The Census takers in Upper Aroostook, (Me.) reports one family of twenty seven children, and several more containing from fifteen to twenty children. In one family he found sixteen children, all of whom were living at home, and the mother was only forty years of age. With such mothers, our sister State has nothing to fear in the race of competition, or occasion to look abroad for immigration to populate her vast wilds.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IS TO VISIT BOSTON; thus, we shall be gratified with a sight of royalty. He is to make a Western tour after leaving the Canadas; drop in upon the President, in a sociable way; Hob-Nob for a day or so with the Knickerbockers of New York, and reach here about the 14th of October.

HOCKEYKEEPERS ATTENTION. Don't forget Mr. White's sale at his bakery to-day. Many of the articles offered—flour, lard, butter, etc., will be found very serviceable in a family. The whole stock is well worth the attention of the public.

A WORTHY SUGGESTION. A correspondent of the Boston Advertiser offers to subscribe one hundred dollars towards procuring a bust of John Quincy Adams, to be placed in Faneuil Hall. He also makes the further offer of five hundred dollars, in case this plan should be exchanged for that of procuring a bronze statue of the great statesman.

ACTS AND RESOLVES OF 1860. William White, Esq., State Printer, has forwarded to us a copy of the Acts and Resolves of the Legislature of Massachusetts during the last regular session, for which attention he merits our thanks.

Mr. John D. Wells, of Cambridge, will preach in the Stone Temple to-morrow.

AFFECTION OF THE THROAT. Many cases of the throat disease are said to have made their appearance in Hingham and Weymouth, terminating fatally in several cases.

SECRETARY OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION. Hon. Joseph White, formerly of Lowell, now of Williamstown, has been appointed by the Governor and Council, Secretary of the Board of Education, in place of Ex-Governor Boutwell, resigned.

POLITICAL. Mr. Douglas has gone South. At a public assemblage, in New Jersey, among other good things, he said, that he had no ambition for Presidential honors; he did not desire the office; he thought he might be more useful where he was; that if the people chose to vote for him, they exercised a privilege which imposed no new obligation.

The Republican Convention which was recently held in Worcester, have put in nomination for the gubernatorial dignities of this State, and successor to Mr. Banks, John A. Andrew, Esq., of Boston. He is considered a strong man, and one that will beat his competitors by a large majority. By the tone of their press, it appears they are receiving great accessions to their ranks daily; the danger now is, that the rush will be so great, that their platform will give way.

Mr. Breckinridge is soon to address the citizens of Kentucky, on certain topics, and to remove the false aspersions cast upon his political character.

The Bell and Everett party are jubilant over their prospects; they are sure, with the assistance of Mr. Douglas' friends, of receiving more than enough of the electoral votes to elect their candidates.

AN OPENING FOR A SAFE RESIDE. Mr. Bates, late proprietor of the Quincy Bakery, has withdrawn from that concern. This leaves a vacancy, which if filled by the right kind of a man, would result in a benefit to the enterprising undertaker, and an accommodation to the community. Quincy has all the elements to give a generous support to such an establishment, and we don't see how she can long do without one.

Mr. Rev. J. C. Fletcher gave us last evening, a brilliant lecture on the religion, customs and people of Brazil. Seldom have we witnessed anything more than the picture he laid before his audience of that exuberant garden of the tropics laden with its strange variety of fruits and flowers, teeming in perpetual harvest for the hand of man. Surely that country must be the garden of the world, and if its people had the enterprise which moves this Yankee nation, imagination could not set a bound to the results they would produce there. As relevant to this comparison the Reverend gentleman stated that the best Remedies employed there for the diseases to which they are subject, are invented and supplied to them by our own well known countryman, Dr. J. C. Ayer of Lowell, Mass., and that not the people only, but the priesthood and the Court of the Emperor down, have constant recourse to the Remedies of this widely celebrated American Chemist. Ledger, Boston.

Another of the good ladies of our city testifies to the efficacy of Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa.

New York, Feb. 7, 1852.
I do hereby certify to the public, that a child of nine, four years old, being troubled with worms, I was induced to purchase a bottle of Dr. M'Lane's Celebrated Vermifuge prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., which I administered; the result was, it brought away an immense number of worms in bunches and strings; many had the appearance of being cut to pieces. My child is now enjoying most excellent health. I take pleasure in recommending it to both young and old, as one of the best medicines I ever used.

Mrs. Ann Jenison, 38 Ninth st.
Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M'Lane's celebrated Vermifuge, manufactured by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Vermifuges in comparison are worthless. Dr. M'Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

For the Patriot Testimonials.

Mr. Editor:—The following testimonials are from living teachers and standard authors, and are worthy of notice, both for the importance of the subject and for their eminent sources.

"I wish not to detract from the exalted profession to which I have the honor to belong, and which includes many of my warmest friends; yet it cannot answer to my conscience to withhold the acknowledgement of my firm belief, that the medical profession (with its prevailing mode of practice) is productive of vastly more evil than good; and were it absolutely abolished, mankind would be infinitely the gainer."—Francis Cogswell, M. D., of Boston.

"I declare, as my conscientious conviction, founded on long experience and reflection, that if there was not a single physician, surgeon, man midwife, chemist, apothecary, druggist, nor drug on the face of the earth, there would be less sickness and less mortality than now prevail!"—James Johnson, M. D., F. R. S., Editor of the Medical Chirurgurgical Review.

"Some patients get well with the aid of medicine; more without it; and still more in spite of it!"—Sir John Forbes, M. D., F. R. S., Physician to Queen Victoria.

"The older physicians grow, the more skeptical they become of the virtues of medicine, and the more they are disposed to trust to the powers of nature!"—Prof. Alex. H. Stevens, M. D., New York.

"In their zeal to do good, physicians have done much harm. They have hurried many to the grave who would have recovered if left to nature!"—Prof. Alonzo Clark, M. D., New York.

"We do not know whether our patients recover because we give them medicine, or because nature causes them. Perhaps bread pills would cure as many as medicine!"—Prof. J. W. Cason, M. D.

"Drugs do not cure disease; disease is always cured by the vis medicatrix nature!" (Powers of nature).—Prof. Joseph M. Smith, M. D.

"Our remedial agents are themselves morbid." "Our medicines act upon the system in the same manner as do the remote causes of disease." "Drug medicines do but cure one disease by producing another."—Prof. J. D. Gross, M. D.

"Of the essence of disease very little is known; indeed, nothing at all!"—Prof. S. D. Gross, M. D.

"The science of medicine is a barbarous jargon, and the effects of our medicines on the human system in the highest degree uncertain, except indeed, that they have destroyed more lives than war, pestilence, and famine combined!"—John Mason Good, M. D., F. R. S.

"The world does move!"—Galileo.

CREDIT TO WHOM CREDIT IS DUE.—We were gratified to learn that the insurance, (five hundred dollars) by the Holyoke Fire Insurance Company of Salem, on the property of Seth Spear, of this town, through the efficiency of their agent, Seth Adams, Esq., was promptly paid on presentation. Such punctuality, is the soul of business. Mr. Adams continues to receive insurance on property for this Company, and on the most favorable terms.

CHRIST CHURCH. This building, we understand, is to be consecrated on the 13th instant. The exterior is already completed. It is of the simplest, purest gothic style, so beautifully adapted to the ritual of the Episcopal Church—and it is surmounted on peak and porch, and chancel window, with that symbol which Christians, of every denomination, love and reverence; in passing it, we are reminded of the lines of Wadsworth—

"And we will not conceal the precious Cross
Like men ashamed; the sun with its first smile
Shall greet that symbol crowning the low pile,
And the fresh air of incense breathing more
Shall waftingly embrace it; and green moss
Creep round its arms through centuries unborn."

We know it will give pleasure to all our readers to learn that the Rev. Dr. Cutler, formerly the faithful and beloved Rector, will be present and preach the consecrating sermon.

The ablest Filmore paper of the North, the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, a journal conducted with signal ability, and having great influence, supports Mr. LINCOLN.

The Albany Journal says that in a town in that neighborhood every man who ever acted with the American party is now out for Lincoln. Lincoln's majority in that town will be double the Republican vote in 1856.

At a meeting of some sixty Americans in Buffalo, a few evenings since, called to give an expression of their views in regard to the propriety of passing themselves over to Douglas, as arranged by Hunt, Brooks & Co., fifty-one concluded to vote for Lincoln.

Zinc nails are now extensively employed in the manufacture of boots and shoes in the place of wood or iron. It is said these nails are also substituted for sewing in ladies' slippers. An iron last is employed, and the nails on being driven in strike the last and become headed or riveted on the inside, thus forming a very secure fastening.

A lady in Harrisburg, (Pa.) had the habit of picking her teeth with a pin. A trifling humor was the consequence, which terminated in a cancer, and she died. The prass and quicksilver used in making these pins will account for the circumstance. Pins are always pernicious to teeth, and should never be used for toothpicks.

A novel feature in a recent picnic of the German Bakers Association of Washington City, was a mammoth loaf of bread, exposed on an open wagon drawn by two horses, the latter led by grooms. It weighed, it is said, about two hundred and fifty pounds.

The Hartford (Conn.) Courant says that the custom of giving the buck of the pew in church to the ladies, originated in times of the Indian wars, when the male members of the family always took their muskets to church, when it was, of course, very proper that they should have the front of the pew, to rush out to repel an attack. Then the inner seat was the one of safety.

The Mowers.

Where mountains round a lonely dale
Our cottage roof inclose,
Come night or morn, the hissing pail
With yellow cream o'erflows;
And roused at break of day from sleep,
And cheerily trudging hither—
A scythe-sweep, and a scythe-sweep,
We mow the grass together.

The fog drawn up the mountain side
And scattered like by flake,
The shimmer of blue above grows wide,
And richer, bluer the lake;
Gay sunlights o'er the hillocks creep,
And join for golden weather—
A scythe-sweep, and a scythe-sweep,
We mow the dale together.

The good wife sits at five, we know,
The master soon comes round,
And many swaths must lie a-row,
Ere breakfast horn shall sound;
The clover and the flax deep,
The grass of silvery feather—
A scythe-sweep, and a scythe-sweep,
We mow the dale together.

The noonday brings its welcome rest
Our toil-wet brows to day;
Anew with merry state and jest
The shrieking honeys sleep.
White falls the brook from steep to steep,
Among the purple heather—
A scythe-sweep, and a scythe-sweep,
We mow the dale together.

For dial, see, our shadows turn;
Low lies the twilight mead;
A scythe, an hour-glass and an urn;
All flesh is grass, we read,
To-morrow's sky may laugh or weep—
To Heaven we leave it whether—
A scythe-sweep, and a scythe-sweep,
We've done our task together.

To the Cat-Bird.

You, who would with wanton art
Counterfeit another's part,
And with noisy utterance claim
Right to an ignoble name—
Inharmonious! why must you,
To a better self untrue,
Gifted with the charm of song,
Do the generous gift such wrong?

Delicate and downy throat,
Shaped for pure, melodious note—
Silvery wing of softest gray—
Bright eyes glancing every way—
Graceful outline—motion free;
Types of perfect harmony!

Al! you much mistake your duty,
Mating discord with beauty—
'Mid these heavenly sunset gleams
Vexing the smooth air with screams—
Burdens the daily breeze
With insane discordances.

I have heard you tell a tale
Tender as the nightingale,
Sweeter than the early thrush
Pipes at day-dawn from the bush.
Wake once more the liquid strain
That you poured, like music-rain,
When, last night, in the sweet weather,
You and I were out together.

Unto whom two notes are given,
One of earth, and one of heaven,
Were it not a shameful tale
That the earth-note should prevail?

For the sake of those who love us,
For the sake of God above us,
Each and all should do their best
To make music for the rest.
So will I no more improve,
Though the chiding be in love;
Uttering harsh rebuke to you,
That were inharmonious, too.

Persevere.

Spite of failure, spite of danger,
Persevere:
To all doubts and fears a stranger,
Persevere:
When a noble cause begins,
Doubling water-tugs is but singing—
If success you would be winning,
Persevere.

Though ignoble tongues assail you,
Persevere:
Let your courage never fail you—
Persevere:
Bright the future flows towards you;
Your own deeds will yet reward you;
Let not hate nor fear retard you—
Persevere.

Anecdotes.

Wife, bring me some cold beef, said a shiftless husband, when, for the first time in his life, he discovered that he was more hungry than thirsty.
There is no beef in the house, was the mild reply.
Fetch me some pork, then.
No pork, either.
Well, then, let me have some potatoes.
Not a potato left.
Thunder and lightning! I get me some bread then.
The bread's all gone.
Well, give me a knife and fork, and let me go through the motions.

Hayman, a famous artist one hundred years ago, was a wit. One of his associates was always complaining of ill health and low spirits, without being able to assign any particular malady as the cause. One evening at Hayman's club it was mentioned that this malade imaginaire had been married the day before.
Is he! and he binged to him! said Hayman. Now he'll know what ails him.

A soldier being asked if he met with much hospitality in Ireland, replied:
That he was in a hospital nearly all the time he was there.

What's the news to-day, Mr. Grumm?
O, there's no news; my wife was sick yesterday, and didn't go out; no news; no news.

Dr. M'LANE'S
VERMIFUGE
LIVER PILLS.

WE beg leave to call the attention of the Trade, and more especially the Physicians of the country, to two of the most popular remedies now before the public.

We refer to
Dr. Chas. M'LANE'S Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills.

We do not recommend them as universal Cure-alls, but simply for what their name purports, viz.:

THE VERMIFUGE,
For expelling Worms from the human system. It has also been administered with the most satisfactory results to various Animals subject to Worms.

THE LIVER PILLS,
For the cure of LIVER COMPLAINTS, all BILIOUS DERANGEMENTS, SICK HEAD-ACHE, &c. In cases of

FEVER AND AGUE, preparatory to or after taking Quinine, they almost invariably make a speedy and permanent cure.

As specifics for the above mentioned diseases, they are Unrivalled, and never known to fail when administered in accordance with the directions.

Their unprecedented popularity has induced the proprietors,
FLEMING BROTHERS,
PITTSBURGH, PA.

to dispose of their Drug business, in which they have been successfully engaged for the last Twenty Years, and they will now give their undivided time and attention to their manufacture. And being determined that Dr. M'LANE'S Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills shall continue to occupy the high position they now hold among the great remedies of the day, they will continue to spare neither time nor expense in procuring the Best and Purest material, and compound them in the most thorough manner. Address all orders to FLEMING BROS., Pittsburgh, Pa.

P. S. Dealers and Physicians ordering from others than Fleming Bros., will do well to write their orders distinctly, and take note that Dr. M'LANE'S Celebrated Vermifuge and Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. To those wishing to give their friends a trial, we will forward per mail, post paid, to any part of the United States, one box of Pills for twelve (12) cents, postage stamps, or one yard of Vermifuge for the same price. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.
Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the precursors of serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and about you are the signs of a dangerous disease. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered liver, and the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in healthy action, they stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the impurities of the blood, and the system is restored to health.

A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the presence of the disease, and unable to do more than suffer, take Ayer's Pills, and you will directly restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous diseases, and makes this purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they will cure a variety of diseases, and by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills will neglect to supply them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known medical persons.

From a Forrester's Merchant of St. Louis, Mo. 4, 1856.
Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the purgative of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable by any other means. My mother has been previously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

Miscellaneous.

Judging from Appearances.

BY D. C. COLESWORTH.

There goes old Jacobs, the mean man! exclaimed a young person to his companion, as he was standing in the door of a shop.

Who is old Jacobs? inquired his friend.

Have you lived in town six months, and not heard of the fellow before? He is one of the meanest fellows in the place. He saves every cent he gets, and hoards it up, but for what purpose, no one can tell, as he has but two children, and they are well enough off. And his dress shows what the man is. He buys the meanest cloth, and looks like a lumper.

What's the fellow worth?
That's more than I can tell. Some rate him at a hundred and fifty thousand dollars—some less. But there's no telling what the man is worth. But his meanness makes him notorious. No one respects him. Why, he was never known to give a cent to any charitable institution, and the poor might starve for aught he would care.

Mr. Jacobs was a man of some seventy years of age. He commenced life a poor boy, but had contrived to rake together quite a fortune. By those who had been less successful in business, he was accused of all sorts of trickery and deception. It was said little of his property was accumulated by strict honesty. At the time of which we speak, his wife had been dead several years, and both children settled in life. Mr. Jacobs attracted some attention—being somewhat singular in his own dress and appearance. There was nothing like pride about him; he purchased for his own use that kind of clothing which he thought would wear the longest, without regard to the prevailing fashion of the day. No one could find much fault with his general habits; for he was strictly temperate and moral. Whenever a subscription was raised for a benevolent object, Mr. Jacobs was the last person called upon. It was currently reported that he never gave a cent for any charitable object whatever.

During one very severe winter, a fire broke out in town and consumed the dwellings of many of the poorer classes. The charitable portion of the community raised a subscription for their relief, and many dollars were contributed by the wealthy, and by men in moderate circumstances. At this time, a gentleman called upon Mr. Jacobs and requested a few dollars from him. After hearing what the man had to say, he remarked:

I cannot put my name down; you know I never do.

Isn't it your duty to give something to aid the suffering, Mr. Jacobs? said the gentleman.

Perhaps it may be; but suppose I don't choose to give anything.

Put down a couple of dollars, you will be none the poorer for it.

No, sir; I will not put down my name for a single cent.

The gentleman left him, remarking to himself, "Old Jacobs" is the meanest man I ever came across. He is not worthy to live in civilized society.

And he didn't fail to express his opinion wherever he went. Stepping into a store of a merchant, he received a dollar from him, and then he related his interview with Mr. Jacobs.

He is a wretched mean man, I know, said the merchant, you can't tell me anything about him. I never knew him to give away a cent in my life; and I have known him full five and thirty years. The children may beg at his door! the poor widow may en-treat, and the suffering may beseech him, but in vain. They get nothing for their pains. I'm glad there are some men with souls in our community. But for them there would be a world of suffering.

Did I show you the letter I received this morning—the letter that contained the money?

No! What money?

I received a letter through the post-office, that contained one hundred dollars for the relief of the sufferers.

Indeed! from whence did it come?

I cannot imagine: the only signature was S—.

He was a benevolent man, whoever it may be.

What a contrast with old Jacobs!

The writer of the letter has a whole soul, but as for Jacobs, it would dance on the point of a needle.

True, he is a mean wretch.

The gentleman after going the rounds of his district to obtain the funds for the sufferers, found that he had collected several hundred dollars, which was equally distributed among the unfortunate.

A poor widow was called upon, and several dollars given to her. She expressed her gratitude in tears, saying:

I have not a stick of wood to burn, and scarcely anything to eat in the house, and but for your kindness, I should have suffered. I always find that the Lord raises up friends and will not let me suffer. About three years ago I lived in one of old Jacob's houses, and you know how particular he is to have the rent paid on the day it is due. My quarter's rent was due; the money was ready, but I had nothing to eat in the house. I was out of meat and potatoes, and had but a dozen sticks of wood. Mr. Jacobs called for his rent. I told him my situation, and asked him to take one-half and loan me the balance for a few days. He refused, saying he must have all that was due him. I gave him every cent I had; but the unfeeling man only gave me a receipt, and left me. I never felt worse in my life. I had nothing, scarcely, in the house, and nothing to buy with. But the Lord was good to me then, as he has been now. Just before nine o'clock, somebody knocked at the door. It was a cartman. He said he was directed to leave the articles in his cart at my house. I thought it was a mistake. But he had particular directions, he said, and would not carry it away. I asked him who sent him, but he said he did not know nor care, since he had got the job and was paid for it. There was a half barrel of flour, a leg of bacon, a bushel of potatoes, some sugar and tea; and I assure you, sir, no person was ever more grateful. Who the benevolent man was that remembered me, I never knew, and probably never shall. The present you have given me, reminds me of the past. A thousand thanks for your kindness! Heaven will reward you.

From every source, the old miser Jacobs received a severe running down. Rich men and poor—the widow and the orphan, were alike in this respect. He had but few friends, and seldom associated much in society. There were a few individuals who were as mean as Jacobs, but not as wealthy, with whom he appeared to be on intimate terms. From the earlier recollections of those who lived by his side a half century, he was always considered close and penurious. Whenever he was owing an individual, however, it was always noticed that he paid promptly, but this was no virtue. He had the means of settling every demand. His town tax and his pew tax were paid on presentation, but when there was a contribution in the society, to which he belonged, the deacons always noticed that he never put into the box more than a half dime, and this amount he never failed to give, whatever might be the object of the contribution.

In the neighborhood where Mr. Jacobs resided, there lived a young man by the name of Edward Mason. His parents were poor; but when quite a lad, he devoted much of his time to reading and study. The old miser appeared to feel some interest in young Edward, and repeatedly said he would make a smart man. Although in humble circumstances, Mr. Jacobs never offered to give him a dollar or otherwise assist him.

One morning, as Mason was passing along the street, a gentleman, with whom he was slightly acquainted, called him and inquired if he would not like to enter college.

I should, said the boy, but my parents are not able to give me an education.

I think, as you take to learning, a classical education will be of great advantage to you. For some days I have thought on the subject, and now I'll tell you what I propose to do. If you continue diligent in your studies, I will procure the necessary funds, and have you enter college.

Edward thanked his friend, at the same time remarking:

I did hope Mr. Jacobs would render me some little assistance; but now I have no hopes of him. He is almost too mean to live, as is known to every one.

Young Mason continued his studies, and when prepared, entered college—his friend furnishing the necessary means. His vacations he spent at home with his parents, and occasionally called upon his old friend Jacobs, whom he found to be as sociable as ever to him. But gradually he became weaned from the miser, and took occasion to speak disrespectfully of him. During one of his vacations, he called upon the old gentleman, and contrived to pin a piece of paper on his back, on which was written, "I am a miser!" As Mr. Jacobs passed along the streets he heard much laughter, but did not suspect the cause, still he called into a merchant's counting room, who, seeing the paper, pointed it out to him.

This is some of Mason's doings, said the old gentleman. He should have more respect for me, and feel that I am too far advanced in life to be trifled with.

Ever after this circumstance, Edward was shy of the old gentleman, but he was free to condemn his niggardly course and miserly disposition. When he was with his associates, and Mr. Jacobs happened to pass along, he would ding out some improper remark, that caused a laugh at the old man's expense.

Finally, Mason graduated, studied law, and commenced practice in his native town. He had brass enough to be a good lawyer, and impudence sufficient to succeed. Edward had not been in practice but a year or two, before he was engaged in a case in which Mr. Jacobs was an interested party. Mason was opposed to him. In his plea he was very severe upon the old gentleman. He touched upon his mean and niggardly behavior, which had become notorious, for a long series of years, and accused him of being anything but an honest man. He had never been known to be generous in a single instance; like a sponge, he was constantly drawing in, but letting nothing out.

Everybody, he continued, in this vicinity, has heard of his disposition; even the children shun him. If I should repeat one half the follies and meanness which are laid to his door, most of which are true, I have no doubt, you, gentlemen of the jury, would be astonished beyond measure. But I will not rake up the past. In the present case you have heard the evidence on both sides, and, if you have an iota of common sense, you cannot hesitate in whose favor to decide.

Notwithstanding the plea of Esquire Mason, the jury decided in favor of Mr. Jacobs.

Having the name of being a hard character, no one seemed to put any confidence in him, and his enemies often resorted to the entanglements of the law, depending mostly upon his unpopularity for their success; but they were often defeated.

The name of Jacobs became so notorious on account of his reputation for meanness, that no one pretended to call upon him for charitable purposes. He was known as the rich miser, and likened unto Dives of old.

He had lived to the common age of man and longer, and the period drew nigh when most give up the ghost. The old gentleman was taken sick, but he was calm and collected. His minister called upon him often, and, from the tenor of his conversation, appeared to feel a deep interest in him.

I have not long to live, said Mr. Jacobs to his pastor, and I know not but I am willing to go. I have lived many years, and I hope I have not spent them in vain. I trust I have done some little good, and I hope I may do some more.

The minister was struck with astonishment at his language. He must be wandering, said he to himself. Every one knows he has been oppressive to the poor, and saved every mill that came into his hands.

This is a wearisome life, continued the sick man, and we are not rightly judged. Our motives few can understand. They are deceived in us.

True, replied the pastor, man cannot look into the heart of his neighbor.

Thus far I have endeavored to live a useful life, and I hope to be at rest in heaven: not on account of my own righteousness, but I trust in the mercy of God.

Just as the pastor was about to reply, Mr. Jacobs said:

As I do not expect to continue long in the world, I wish to entrust to your care several papers which you will find in a small trunk in my desk. The keys are lying by the window.

The minister assured him he would do as requested, and took the trunk from the desk.

In a day or two after, the old gentleman died and was buried. It was singular to hear the remarks that were made after his decease. He was no benefit to any one while he lived, one remarked, and I am not sorry he is dead. He was an old reprobate, said another, and the devil has got him at last. His whole life was worse than a blank, remarked a third, and no one regrets that the old fellow is dead.

Mr. Jacobs had been dead for a few days when the minister of the parish called a few of his friends together to examine the contents of the trunk, for there, they were led to suppose, his will was deposited, and other important documents.

Judge of the surprise of the gentlemen, when, on opening the papers, they found that, for the last fifteen years of his life, Mr. Jacobs had distributed annually from fifteen to two thousand dollars among the poor of his native place! There were the documents and records to show the fact. He had gone through the city unknown and in disguise, and distributed his money where he found want and poverty. It was he who sent the money in a letter to the gentleman who solicited charity of him, with such apparent ill-success, when so many became homeless on account of a disastrous fire. It was he who sent the poor widow the flour, tea, &c., after she had paid him her rent. It was he who had repeatedly sent to benevolent societies hundreds of dollars through the post-office; and it was he, too, who furnished the means of educating Edward Mason, the lawyer, who treated him so unkindly.

He spent many a hundred dollars for his benefit. After leaving a few thousand dollars a-piece to his sons, in his will, the remainder of his property, amounting to about one hundred thousand dollars, was to be kept as a permanent fund, the interest to be distributed yearly among the poor of his native city.

When these facts were announced the current of public opinion changed in a moment. He, whom they had looked upon as a mean wretch, now appeared little less than an angel, and no language was too exalted to speak of the public benefactor.

On a further examination of his papers, they found hundreds of little slips, of various dates, for more than two score years back, for cash received of A. B. C., for various sums of from five to a hundred dollars each. Thus, had this gentleman gone about, and distributed his money, helping the sad and desponding—while hundreds were denouncing him—pointing the finger of scorn, and calling him every bad name they could think of. He suffered the reproach and contumely of his fellow citizens without a murmuring word, and from those, too, who had received countless favors from his hand.

After his death everybody was anxious to do justice to the man, who, when living, all pretended to despise; and no one exerted himself more than young Mason, the lawyer. A large monument was erected over his sleeping body, on which was inscribed his name and age, and the day of his death, with the following line beneath:

"JUDGE NOT FROM APPEARANCES."
Since the death of Mr. Jacobs, the inhabitants of the town in which he lived have been extremely careful how they judge their fellow creatures. If a man has the appearance of being mean and miserly, and a word is heard to his discredit, a dozen voices will exclaim, "Don't judge him till he is dead—remember old Jacobs." The old are respected and revered. No young man, for many a year, has been known to speak a disrespectful word to the gray-headed and infirm. The singular life of Mr. Jacobs has exerted a happy influence throughout the place; and hundreds every year who receive comforts from the interest of the property he left, speak of him with tears of affection. His memory will never die.

Washington's Code of Manners.

Every action ought to be with some sign of respect to those present. Be no flatterer; neither play with no one who delights not to be played with. Read no paper or book in company. Come not near the papers or books of another when he is writing. Let your countenance be cheerful; but in serious matters be grave. Let your discourse with others, on matters of business, be short. It is good manners to let others speak first. When a man does all he can, do not blame him though he succeeds not well. Take admonition thankfully. Be not too hasty to receive lying reports to the injury of another. Let your dress be modest, and consult your condition. Play not the peacock by looking vainly at yourself. It is better to be alone than in bad company. Let your conversation be without malice or envy. Urge not your friend to discover a secret. Break not a jest where none takes pleasure in mirth. Gaze not on the blemishes of others. When another speaks be attentive.

The Trundle Bed.

BY R. M. STREETER.

As I rumaged through the attic,
Lying to the falling rain
As it pattered on the shingles
And against the window-pane—
Peeping over chests and boxes,
Which with dust were thickly spread,
Saw I in the farthest corner,
What was once my trundle bed.

So I drew it from the recess,
Where it had remained so long,
Hearing all the while the music
Of my mother's voice in song.
As she sung in sweetest accents
What I since have often read:
"Hush, my dear, be still in slumber,
Holy angels guard thy bed."

As I listened, recollections
That I thought had been forgot,
Came with all the gush of memory,
Rushing, thronging to the spot,
And I wandered back to childhood,
To those merry days of yore,
When I knelt beside my mother,
By this bed upon the floor.

Then it was with hands so gently
Placed upon my infant head,
That she taught my lips to utter
Carefully the words she said,
Never can they be forgotten—
"Deep are in memory driven:
"Hallowed be Thy name, O Father!
Father! who art in Heaven."

This she taught me; then she told me
Of its import great and deep!
After which I learned to utter
"Now I lay me down to sleep."
Then it was with hands uplifted
And in accents soft and mild,
That my mother said: "Our Father,
O, do thou bless my child."

Years have passed, and that dear mother
Long has mouldered 'neath the sod,
And I trust her sainted spirit
Revels in the home of God.
But that scene at Summer twilight
Never has from memory fled,
And it comes with all its freshness
When I see my trundle bed.

If We Knew.

If we knew the cares and crosses
Crowding round our neighbor's way;
If we knew the little losses,
Sorely grievous day by day,
Would we then have a shadow him
For the lack of thrill and gain—
Leaving on his heart a stain?
Leaving on his heart a stain?

If we knew the clouds above us,
Held by gentle breezes there,
Would we turn away all trembling,
In our blind and weak despair?
Would we shrink from little shadows,
Lying on the dewy grass,
While 'tis only birds of Eden
Just in mercy dying past?

If we knew the silent story,
Quivering through the heart of pain,
Would our womanhood dare doom them
Back to haunts of guilt again?
Life hath many a tangled crossing,
Joy hath many a bleak of woe,
And the checks, tear-washed, are whitest;
This the blessed angels know.

Let us reach into our bosoms
For the key to other lives,
And with love toward erring spirits,
Cherish good that still survives;
So that when our disrobed nupts
Soar to realms of light again,
We may say, dear Father, judge us
As we judge our fellow men.

Song.

In early youth, when hope was high;
Gaily I sang of love and truth;
But those sweet hours are all gone by,
Gone the dear dreams of early youth.

O that such dazzling dreams should fade!
How happy would life's journey prove,
Where friendship's bosom ne'er betray'd,
Nor wounded e'er the heart of love!

Anecdotes.

Landlord, said a commercial traveller, you do me too much honor—you let me sleep among the big bugs last night.

Oh, don't be too modest, my dear sir, said the landlord; I doubt not they have your own blood in their veins.

Mother, said a little boy who had just completed a stool, the legs of various lengths, standing wee-way, as he wiped the perspiration from his forehead, does God see everything?

Yes, my child, but why do you ask?

Because I guess He'll laugh when he sees that stool!

My dear Julia, said one pretty girl to another, can you make up your mind to marry that odious Mr. Snuff?

Why, my dear Mary, replied Julia, I believe I could take him at a pinch!

Tell your mistress that I have torn the curtain, said a lodger to a female domestic.

Very well, sir, mistress will put it down as an extra rent.

Ma, aunt Jane has been eating the honey, said an observing son.

How do you know, my dear? asked the astonished mother.

"Cause I heard father say he wanted to sip the honey from her lips, responded the youth.

I have gone into the silk business, said a man to his neighbor.

So I suppose, returned the other, for I saw you reeling all day yesterday.

Miscellaneous.

The Wife's Ruse.

Don't sit up for me to-night, Bertha, said Philip Graham, one pleasant winter evening, as he went to bestow a parting kiss upon his wife's sweet lips. I have engaged to take Mrs. Mortimer and Helen to the opera to-night, and may return late.

To hear Vestilli! Oh, how delightful! I had forgotten that she was to sing to-night. Why may I not be of your party?

You might, I suppose; but really, you go so little, I did not mention it to them, and—

Never mind; I can go some other time I dare say.

Oh yes, to-morrow night if you like.

Very well, that will do.

Good night, then, my love, and with another kiss Bertha was left alone.

Dear, handsome fellow! she sighed, throwing herself down in the low lounging chair by the fireside; so good and kind! if he only didn't care so much for society; and if that gay widow and her bold daughter would let him alone. The third evening this week that he has spent in company with them. True, I was at that stupid party, but I am sure they engrossed more of his attention than I did; and others noticed it too. One prim asked me if I was not jealous, and that lachrymose, Mrs. Prym, who is always groaning, cast up her eyes, and pressed my hand, in token of sympathy, when I bade her good night. No, I am not jealous; but I wonder how he would like to have me flirt so. I have a half a mind to try it, if I only knew any one I liked well enough.

A sharp tinkle of the door-bell startled her, and, a moment after, a tall gentleman, mustached almost alarmingly, entered the room. Bertha manifested a little surprise; half of terror; but the words "My dear Bertha! have you forgotten me?" had hardly passed the stranger's lips ere she was in his arms, exclaiming:

Leonard! dear Leonard! welcome home!

But where is your husband, dearest? He asked half an hour later, when she had asked and answered many a rapid question. I wonder he can be tempted to leave this pleasant home and sweet little wife for a single evening.

He has gone to the opera, she answered, hesitating slightly.

Without you? But I suppose you have some little whim to excuse you—tired of the prima donna, or something of the kind, I presume. You should spend a winter in the mining districts of California, in order to appreciate your privileges, he said laughingly.

No, I have never heard Madame Vestilli, and should really have done so to-night, but circumstances prevented.

Is it too late yet? Will you go with me? Let me be your cavalier once more, as in the old times.

An idea occurred to Bertha; here was an excellent opportunity to put in execution the plan which she was thinking of when he arrived. What should prevent her? Nothing, she resolved; and her answer was:

I shall be delighted, I'm sure; I will be ready in a few moments.

Resting gracefully upon the crimson cushions, sat the fair Mrs. Mortimer, and her fairer daughter, Helen Mortimer, dressed with regal splendor, and her gorgeous attire suited well the dark style of her beauty. A smile of triumph and gratified vanity shone in her flashing eyes, as she listened to the flattering remarks of Philip Graham, whose very distinguished appearance, polished manners, and ready wit made him a most agreeable companion, and to whose good offices she trusted for admittance to circles from which her bold gaiety and freedom of manner might otherwise debar her. As for Philip Graham, though he never would have dreamed of such a woman for the quiet atmosphere of home, yet he loved to live away an hour in her company, little dreaming that pain or anxiety was caused by his conduct, since no word or act of Bertha's hinted as such.

See, Graham! exclaimed Miss Mortimer, mer, is not that your wife in the box opposite us?

Bertha! declare! How came she here? and with a stranger, too! said Philip, looking in the direction indicated.

Then you don't know him? said Miss Mortimer. Very elegant in appearance, and very much devoted to his fair lady, I should say; some old lover, I presume.

Excuse me Miss Mortimer, but my wife is too lady-like for indelicacy, he answered, sternly.

Offended, Philip? and with me? she said turning her lustrous eyes pleadingly toward him. Pardon me, I did but jest.

She said her unloved hand upon his arm. But the arts which had charmed and dazzled the young husband had lost their power, and he only answered politely her expressions of regret. Bertha met his gaze of surprise smiling, but soon seemed absorbed in the music, and the remarks of her companion, whose interest in her comfort was sufficiently apparent. He seemed well known among the audience, too; for the watchful Philip noticed many bows and smiles of recognition.

There is Mr. Golding, who knows every body; I will ask him the name of your wife's attendant, said Mrs. Mortimer, who had marked with surprise the discomposure of Graham, whom, as she told her daughter afterwards, she had supposed too much a man of the world to care for his wife.

Mr. Golding, pray tell me the name of the gentleman opposite—the one with the magnificent beard and dark eyes.

Who! Why, I declare! It is my old friend, Leonard Percy. He must have arrived to-day. He has been four years absent. I must go round and see him. I see he has found Mrs. Graham already. I congratulate you, sir, he continued, turning to Philip.

Congratulate me! for what? muttered Philip in surprise! a dim idea entering his brain that Helen was right in her conjecture, and that Mr. Golding meant to insult him.

The opera was over at last, and, resisting for the first time Helen's alluring glances, and Mrs. Mortimer's earnest invitation to come in and spend an hour at cards, Philip hastened homeward in time to see a carriage drive rapidly away from the door. Bertha was already unbending her tresses when he entered her chamber; and in answer to his questions she only answered carelessly.

Yes, I had an opportunity, and thought I would improve it. You know it looks so stupid for married people to be always together in public. Leonard is an old friend of mine, and I am glad he has returned; I shall enjoy his society very much.

She was only repeating words which Philip had used many a time when praising the beauty and grace of some new acquaintance; but they did not seem very satisfactory now, for he only muttered hump! in a discontented way, and was silent.

Bertha saw the success of her scheme, and laughed mischievously as she lay down to slumber, and dream perchance, of the sleigh-ride she was to enjoy with her friend on the morrow; Philip had engaged to ride, too, with Mrs. and Miss Mortimer; and so it chanced that the two parties met on the crowded thoroughfare, and he had just time to catch a laughing glance and the wave of a little gloved hand from his wife as the sleighs dashed past each other. He spent that evening at home, but not alone with his wife; Percy was there, and Bertha chatted with him and played for him, and they sang together songs replete with love and sentiment—songs which he reminded her they had sung often and often together in olden time. At last, angry with himself, his wife, and his guest, Philip left the room, excusing himself on the plea of business, but adding, that two such old friends must have so much to say to each other, that a third person would be almost an intruder. Mr. Percy looked surprised, but Bertha answered smilingly:

Oh, yes, Leonard and I have plenty of subject for conversation.

Leonard, indeed! growled Philip, on his way to the library. Confound the fellow—what does he mean with his old songs?

He remained alone till the visitor departed, and could hardly believe his eyes when he saw Percy imprint a kiss upon the brow of his wife, which she took as a matter of course.

Pray, do all your friends take their departure in that loving manner? he asked as she entered the library.

Oh, no! but Leonard is a privileged character, and besides, I am endeavoring to bring my old-fashioned notions of propriety to a more modern standard. I hope to become accustomed to those improvements in time, and to take them as easily and gracefully as some of your favorite ladies do—Miss Mortimer, for instance. I have noticed that you rarely meet or part without some such harmless liberties.

It was true that in the first days of his fascination for the bold beauty he had often praised her gay manners to his wife, but it was strange how differently these things looked from a different point of view.

But Miss Mortimer is unmarried; and besides it was all a joke, our meeting and parting in that way, he answered.

Very well, Percy, is unmarried; and we will call our parting a joke, if you please, was the reply.

As you will; but I don't admire such jokes I assure you.

What! jealous, Philip? and I have been in Percy's company only three times. Let's see—once at the opera, once sleigh-riding, and this evening.

No, I am not jealous, but I don't see what has come over you. Don't you know that you will ruin your reputation if you go on in this way? With men it is different; they are not expected to be so exclusive in their attachments. Society has claims upon gentlemen which they must fulfil.

True, doubtless; and these same claims of society extend to the ladies, I suppose, and we ought of course to emulate the generous, self-sacrificing examples of the sterner sex.

Philip could only think, that however willing he might be to sacrifice himself upon the altar of society, he did not wish his wife to devote herself to its claim; but he could not say so, with those watchful eyes watching him so closely, and therefore he remained silent.

When he returned to dinner the next day, he found his wife absent, and a note informed him that she had gone with Percy to spend the day at her father's country seat, a few miles out of the city, and also, that if he pleased, he might take the evening cars, spend a few hours at the "Homestead," and return with them.

If I please! Well, I don't please to do any such thing. How changed she is, since Percy's coming to leave me so, when she has never visited her old home alone before during over two years of married life.

But the quiet hour alone in the dining-room was favorable for meditation, and he finally resolved to seek his wife, and confessing the errors which her conduct had shown him in their true light, endeavor to persuade her to resume once more the quiet and domestic habits which he now saw were necessary to happiness. He was warmly welcomed by the family at the "Homestead," but Bertha was invisible.

She has just come in, said her mother in answer to his enquiries. You will find her and Leonard in the south room.

Here, runaway! said he, as he entered the room, why did you not meet me, as you did in the days when I came wooing?

I certainly would, had I known of your arrival; but Leonard and I were out watching the skaters on the lake. I have never been on the ice before, since the day six years ago, when it proved so treacherous to me, and when dear Leonard rescued me from the chilling waves.

Dear Leonard! I thought it was your brother who saved you, exclaimed Philip.

It was my brother, dear Philip. Let me introduce to you my half brother, Frank Leonard Percy. I should have made you acquainted before, but I wished to try some of the pleasures of flirting; and no one understands the art so well as Leonard—except my husband.

And he will gladly give up all claims to proficiency in the art, as you call it, if you will promise to let it alone in future, said Philip, who had been shaking hands heartily with Percy.

What! and leave the claims of society unfulfilled, and the widow and fatherless unconsolated in their desolation? asked Bertha, her face radiant with mirth and triumph.

Yes, mix, was the laughing answer; and he kept his word.

Fashion.

A volume on this subject might be made very curious and entertaining, for our ancestors were not less vascillating, and perhaps more capriciously grotesque, though with infinitely less taste than the present generation. Were a philosopher and an artist, as well as an antiquary to compose such a work, much diversified entertainment and some curious investigation of the progress of the arts and taste would doubtless be the result.

The origin of many fashions was in the endeavor to conceal some deformity of the inventor; hence the cushions, ruffs, hoops, and other monstrous devices.

Patches were invented in England in the reign of Edward VI. by a foreign lady, who thus ingeniously covered a wen on her neck.

When The Spectator wrote, full bottomed wigs were invented by a French barber, one Duvalier, whose name they perpetuated for the purpose of concealing an elevation in the shoulder of the Dauphin.

Charles VII. of France, introducing long coats to hide his ill-made legs.

Shoes with very long points, full two feet in length, were invented by Henry Plantagenet, Duke of Anjou, to conceal a large excrescence on one of his feet.

Others, on the contrary, adopted fashions to set off their peculiar beauties—as Isabella of Bavaria, remarkable for her gallantry and the fairness of her complexion, introduced the fashion of leaving the shoulders and part of the neck uncovered.

Fashions sometimes originate in some temporary event, as after the battle of Steenkirk, where the allies wore long cravats, by which the French frequently seized them (a circumstance perpetuated on the medals of Louis XIV.), cravats were called steenkirk; and after the battle of Ramilies, wigs received that denomination.

In the year 1735 the men had no hats, but a little chapeau de bras; in 1745 they wore a very small hat; in 1755 they wore enormous ones, as may be seen in Jeffrey's curious "Collection of Habits in all Nations." Old Puttenham in his very rare work, "The Art of Poetic," page 239, on the present topic gives some curious information:

"Henry VIII. caused his own head and all his courtiers to be polled, and his beard to be cut short. Before that time it was thought more decent, both for old men and young, to be all shaven and wear long hair, rounded or square. Now again at this time (Elizabeth's reign) the young gentlemen of the Court have taken up their long hair trailing on their shoulders, and think it more decent for what object I would be glad to know."

It was observed by the lively Vieille de Manville, that there are flagrant follies in fashion which must be endured while they reign, and which never appear ridiculous till they are out of fashion.

Why the Mill was Stopped.

In one of the older States once resided an infidel, the owner of a saw-mill, situated by the side of the highway, over which a large portion of a Christian congregation passed every Sabbath to and from church. This infidel, having no regard for the Sabbath, was as busy, and his mill was as noisy on that holy day, as on any other. Before long it was observed, however, that at a certain time before service the mill would stop, remain silent, and appear to be deserted for a few minutes, when its noise and clatter would recommence and continue till about the close of the service, when for a short time it again ceased.

It was soon noticed that one of the deacons of the church passed the mill to the place of worship during the silent interval; and so punctual was he to the hour, that the infidel knew just when to stop his mill, so that it should be silent while the deacon was passing, although he paid no regard to the passing of others. On being asked why he paid this mark of respect to the deacon, he replied:

"The deacon professes just what the rest of you do; but he lives also such a life, that it makes me feel here, (putting his hand upon his heart,) to run my mill while he is passing."

This incident illustrates the power of a holy, consistent life, and shows us clearly the kind of influence we should exert upon those around us. This good man, it appears, "walked in wisdom" toward those without the church of Christ, as the Apostle exhorts all Christians to do. He exhibited in his daily intercourse a temper and conduct corresponding with the principles which he professed; and while such deportment will not always induce a scoff to embrace those principles, it will go far to disarm his prejudices, that his esteem for one professing them may in the end lead him to a hearty embrace of the truth.

Glass Manufacture.

The principal kinds of glass now manufactured are, flint glass, or glass of lead; plate glass, or glass of pure soda; crown glass, the best window glass; broad glass, a coarse window glass; and bottle or coarse green glass. Flint glass is so named because the siliceous ingredient was originally employed in the form of ground flints. It is now composed of one hundred parts purified sand, sixty parts litharge or red lead, and thirty parts of purified pearlash. To correct the green color derived from combustible matter, or oxide of iron, a little black oxide of manganese is added, and sometimes nitre and arsenic; the fusion is usually accomplished in about thirty hours. For plate glass, good carbonate of soda, procured by decomposing common salt with pearlash, is employed as the flux. The English crown, or fine window glass, is made of sand, vitrified by the muffle furnace, manufactured by incineration of sea-weed on the Scotch and Irish shores. Broad glass is made of a mixture of soap-boiler's waste, kelp and sand, in various proportions; two of the waste, one of kelp, and one of sand, form a pretty good quality of broad glass. Bottle glass may be made from a mixture of common sand and lime, with a little common clay and sea salt.

Straitening Accounts.

In a certain parish in England, a Quaker barber received, a note for church rates, five shillings and sixpence. He called upon the clergyman of the parish and said:

Pray, friend, what dost thou mean by this note?

Mean! why it is for the church-rate; don't you see?

Yes, friend, but what is it for?

Why, for the repair of the church, and for the decent maintenance of public worship, to be sure.

Well, friend, but what have I to do with that? I don't attend thy church.

O, that don't signify; the church is always open, and it's your own fault if you don't come. Besides, it's the law, and you must pay.

Well, friend, I take leave to tell thee that I think that a very unjust law that obliges me to pay for a ministry and a religion which I don't attend. Fare thee well.

A few days afterward, the barber, by way of straitening accounts with the parson, sent his reverence a note:

Debtor to Timothy Salters, for shaving and hair cutting, five shillings and sixpence.

The receipt of this note by the parson very quickly brought him to the shop, in no good humor either.

What do you mean by sending me this bill? You never cut my hair nor shaved me in your life!

Nay, friend, but thou knowest my shop is always open, and it's thine own fault if thou dost not come to be shaved.

Let the Children Sleep.

We earnestly advise that all who think a great deal, who have infirm health, who are in trouble, or who have to work hard, to take all the sleep they can get, without medical means.

We caution parents, particularly, not to allow their children to be waked up of mornings—let nature wake them up, she will not do it prematurely; but have a care that they go to bed at an early hour; let it be earlier and earlier, until it is found that they wake up themselves in full time to dress for breakfast. Being waked up early, and allowed to engage in before or any studies, late and just before retiring, has given many a beautiful and promising child the brain fever, or determined ordinary ailments to the production of water on the brain.

Let parents make every possible effort to have their children go to sleep in a pleasant humor. Never scold or give lectures, or in any way wound a child's feeling as it goes to bed. Let all banish business and every worldly care at bed time, and let sleep come to a mind at peace with God and all the world.

Going on an Errand.

About ten years ago, there lived near Cincinnati a family by the name of Stringer—She eldest son, Jake, was a most eccentric genius. One day his mother said:—"Jake, I want you to go to the store"—half a mile distant—"and get me a quarter's worth of sugar and a quarter's worth of soap." Jake roused himself up, brushed the whittlings from his lip, and started forward on his errand. He did not return.

Ten years passed by, and no tidings were heard of the errand. One day, as the family were sitting down to their Thanksgiving dinner, the door opened and in came a tall, mustached, good-looking man, with some bundles in his hand. It was Jake Stringer. All the family sprang to their feet in astonishment, but the mother and Jake were perfectly cool. "Mother," said Jake, "here's your sugar and soap." "Lay them on the table and eat your dinner," said Mrs. Stringer; "you ought to be whipped for staying so long."

Be a Whole Woman.

Young women, you are entering upon the voyage of life, which is a path of duty. Before you, wide open, is the path of honor, right and upright womanhood. You are to become a wife, a mother, a counselor, an advisor, a friend. Duties more delicate than others, because they underlie all others, will be devolved upon you. You must do your part toward fashioning the character of a generation, and shaping the destiny of a state.

To accomplish the task set before you, you must be a whole woman. Aim to instill into every act of life the noblest principles of your sex, and stamp in burning letters upon your conduct, the whole truths of womanhood—Turn aside in disgust from the glitter and the glare, and the meaningless butlerly display of the World's Vanity Fair. Shut your eyes and stop your ears to the rounded form and alluring tongue of vice. Be a whole woman. Learn to sew, to wash, to cook, to bake, to read, to talk, to act.

Give us the true woman, who is not afraid to soil her hands by contact with honest dough, nor twirl her finely moulded arms in a pot of greasy water. Give us the woman who knows how to keep a house in only by carefully cultivated mustaches, and whose sympathy is kindled only by the fast, flashy, trashy, sensual and foolish French novel. Let them continue thus to weaken and poison society, and to become the mothers of worthless and wicked sons. But the true matrons of America are of another class.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Sept. 15th, 1860.

THE CONVENTIONS. Three wings of the political family of this Commonwealth, held their Conventions on Wednesday last, to nominate candidates for State Officers to be supported at the Fall election. Notwithstanding the storm, which had all the violence of an equinoctial, they were well attended. The first, (because nearest home) was held in the Tremont Temple, in Boston. Between ten and eleven hundred delegates were present and occupied the first floor; the galleries were filled with spectators. The Hall was tastefully decorated with flags and mottoes, and portraits of some of our most eminent statesmen. Flegg's Band was stationed in the area fronting the main entrance, and discoursed most excellent music. Speeches were made by Col. Isaac H. Wright and James S. Whitney Esq., which were received with much enthusiasm. After an organization had been effected by the choice of Dr. George B. Loring, of Salem, as President, the following ticket was selected:

For Governor, Hon. B. F. Butler of Lowell.
Lieut. Gov., D. A. Carpenter, of Greenfield.

Secretary of State, W. H. Constock, of Middleboro'.

Attorney General, George W. Warren of Charlestown.

Treasurer, George Denny, of Boston.

Auditor, J. W. Mansur, of Fitchburg.

Elected at large, Chester W. Chapin, of Springfield, and Eben Sutton, of Danvers.

The Bell and Everett party which met at Worcester, was also largely represented.

So large and enthusiastic a gathering of that old and time-honored party has not been witnessed for years; a good omen, they believe of future success. The meeting was very harmonious, and after the permanent organization, by the choice of the Hon. Osmyn Baker, of Northampton, as President, the following candidates were chosen.

For Governor, Amos A. Lawrence, of Brookline.

Lieut. Gov., Edward Dickinson, of Amherst.

Secretary of State, Thomas Parsons, of Brookline.

Treasurer, Samuel A. Eliot, of Cambridge.

Auditor, J. Henry Hall, of Worcester.

Attorney General, Henry Morris, of Springfield.

Elected at large, Levi Lincoln, of Worcester, and Marshall P. Wilder, of Dorchester.

At Springfield also, the other great Convention was in council. Twelve hundred delegates were present. Oliver Stevens, Esq., of Boston, was chosen as presiding officer, and the following ticket for State Officers, was then nominated:

For Governor, Erasmus D. Beach, of Springfield.

Lieut. Gov., Charles Thompson, of Charlestown.

Secretary of State, Samuel W. Bowerman, of Pittsfield.

Treasurer, Isaac Adams of Boston.

Auditor, James Estabrook, of Worcester.

Attorney General, Samuel O. Lamb, of Greenfield.

Elected at large, Isaac Davis, of Worcester, and Charles Heebner, of Lee.

The following named gentlemen, were the regular nominated candidates from this town to the Worcester Convention. They were presented too late for insertion last week.

John M. Gougas, Jeffrey R. Brackett, Francis Williams, William S. Perry, Edward Turner, Lloyd G. Horton, Samuel Curtis, James E. Tirrell and Franklin Curtis.

Substitutes—Washington M. French, Albert Hayden, Ebenezer W. Underwood, Albert Thayer, Bryant Newcomb, Ebenezer Adams, Stephen Bates, John Faxon and C. S. French.

MAINE A Republican tornado passed over this State on Monday last, sweeping every thing before it. Popular Sovereignty braced itself up for a manly resistance; but it was forced to yield to overpowering numbers. There has been bad management by the Democrats in this campaign, and we think by this time they begin to see it. The truth is, the Republicans have carried their entire Congressional ticket, and the State by seventeen thousand majority. Well, what can't be helped must be borne; if the result does not impair our reciprocal relations, or effect, adversely, the in-gathering crops, we are satisfied; for we shall want their produce in the Fall.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT. We are again called to make our acknowledgments for renewed favors from our esteemed friends, Mr. Whitney and lady. Their kindness is generous and unbounded.

Christ Church, Quincy.

THE CONSECRATION.

The consecration of Christ Church, took place on the 13th inst., as we had previously announced. The clergy assembled at the house of Jeffrey R. Brackett, the Chairman of the Building Committee, whence they proceeded to the Church.

As the long array of clergy, in their surplices, headed by the Bishop, moved up the aisle, repeating alternately verses of the 24th Psalm, the effect was in the highest degree imposing. The instrument of endowment was read by Professor Jewett, Senior Warden; the sentence of consecration by the Rev. Mr. Burroughs; morning prayers by the Rev. Mr. Church; lessons by the Rev. Mr. Stearns; and the Epistle by the Rev. Mr. Haskins; then followed the sermon by the Rev. Dr. Cutler.

The day was everything that could have been desired, the arrangements complete, and we believe a happier assemblage was never crowded into any church in this Diocese.

On Sunday next the sacraments of communion and baptism will be performed at 10 A.M., and an occasional sermon will be preached by the Rev. Henry Burroughs, of Boston, at 4 P.M.

THE INTERIOR, ETC.

Having in a previous paper described the exterior of the edifice in a hasty manner, we will now do the same with the interior. Passing through the porch, over encaustic tiles, the first object that attracts the eye, is a very elegant and elaborate mural monument of highly polished white marble, with a dark ground; it is of that ancient style so much used in the English churches in the 17th and 18th centuries. The central part is composed of two ornate pilasters, enclosing a panel on which is the plate in diamond form of pure white marble, bearing this inscription:—

IN MEMORY OF
REV. EBENEZER MILLER, S. T. D.
First Rector of this church,
Son of Samuel and Rebecca (Belcher) Miller,
Born at Milton, June 20, A. D. 1703,
Received into holy order as Deacon at London
June 29, A. D. 1726,
Ordained as Priest by the Bishop of London,
July 9, A. D. 1727,
Appointed Missionary for Braintree, (N. E.)
by the society, for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts,
August 26, A. D. 1727,
Entered upon his ministry over this Church,
December 25, A. D. 1727,
And died February 11, A. D. 1763,
After faithful service as a Pastor of more than Thirty-five years.

Also, of MARTHA, his wife, daughter of Thomas Mottram, of Addlethorpe,
In the County of Lincoln, England.
Married in the Church of St. Martin in the Fields, Westminster, Nov. 16, A. D. 1726.
And died at Braintree, (Quincy),
October 28, A. D. 1755.
In the Fifty-second year of her age.

This Tablet is erected by their Great Grandson,
CHARLES EDWARD MILLER,
September, A. D. 1850.

The whole rests on a deeply projecting moulding, two nicely carved corbels support this; the space between bearing the Coat-of-Arms, most exquisitely carved. Above the central panel rises a rich entablature, terminating in an urn, around which a serpent is twined, the convolutions of his body forming handles, his head darts out between two torches, the flames of which rising above, and being united, form the top of the urn—(symbolizing that while the part of us which turns to ashes, is subject to "the trail of the serpent," the soul is above his power). On the cornice, immediately over the pilasters, is placed on one side the students Roman lamp, and on the other a pile of books.

The whole was executed by Messrs. McGrath & Matthews, of this town, and we doubt if it can be equaled by any artist in the country. It is certainly the most beautiful thing of its kind we have ever seen.

Directly opposite to this monument, near the door, and waiting to receive any child on its first entrance into the church, is a white marble Font, upon a dark pedestal. It is of an octagonal form, severely plain, and ornamented only on one panel with the "Lilies of the Annunciation." This, also, was a gift to the society, as a votive offering, from one of its members.

On further entrance into the church, we were struck with the loftiness of the ceiling, rising, as it does, about fifty feet to the open finish of the ridge.

Turning and facing to the East, we see the chancel with emblematic windows, beneath which stands the altar, covered with a rich cloth. The desk, lectern, robing and organ rooms, and all the pews, are of solid black walnut, upholstered with crimson. The richly tinted windows are just large enough to admit "that dim religious light" required by the worshipper.

As a whole, we think there is not, in this vicinity, a building better suited to its purposes; and it is a cause of congratulation to this ancient society that it possesses such—so well calculated for its new growth and prosperity.

The architects and superintendents were Messrs. Preston & Emerson of Boston.

Messrs. J. P. McClair & Levi A. Sleeper of Quincy, the contractors. We should judge that each deserved great credit for the manner in which he has performed his part.

Communication.

SPRINGFIELD, SEP. 12—EVENING

This is a week of political Conventions in Massachusetts. A strong Northeastern storm is prevailing, giving the appearance of Nature to the eye of the traveller as he looks from the cars a sombre hue.

The ride from Boston to Springfield, is through a fertile portion of our State, and on a pleasant autumnal day the view would have been charming. The crops looked propitious; the apple trees loaded with fruit, and the fields and pastures as verdant and luxuriant as June. The husbandman's labors will indeed be blessed the present year.

The Democratic Convention was held here to-day in the City Hall, a spacious room, but owing to its construction, a poor one for public speaking, from some defect in the reflection of sound. The Committee reported twelve hundred Delegates from one hundred and sixty-nine towns—all Douglas men.

After the usual preliminaries of organization, by which Oliver Stevens, Esq., of Boston, was chosen President, with the usual quota of Vice Presidents and Secretaries, the Convention selected as their candidate for Governor, the Hon. Erasmus D. Beach, of Springfield; for Lieut. Governor, Charles Thompson, Esq., of Charlestown. Several speeches were made, and much enthusiasm manifested, especially when the name of Stephen A. Douglas was mentioned; the champion of non-intervention or popular sovereignty. For so large a body of men, the proceedings were harmonious and orderly. There were no indications of fusion with any other party, and no propositions made to the Convention for union, by the Bell and Everett Convention at Worcester. The nominations of three State Conventions held to-day in the State, will undoubtedly be straight nominations throughout. We are to have four candidates for Governor. Mr. Beach, Hon. Amos A. Lawrence, John A. Andrew, Esq., and Benj. F. Butler, Esq. The Bell and Everett Convention at Worcester, is said to be very large and spirited, numbering some two hundred Delegates. Thus, the campaign is fairly opened in Massachusetts, and let every man exercise the inestimable privilege of casting his ballot for the ticket he likes best.

By telegraph we learn, that the Douglas barbecue, held to-day in Jones' Wood, New York, twenty thousand persons were present. Douglas and Johnson were there, and enthusiastically received. In the speech of Mr. Douglas, he urged a cordial union with every union-man—with every man who was true to the Constitution; with every man who was in favor of enforcing the laws in all contingencies. If Mr. Breckinridge was a union man he was with him. He appealed to all the voters of New York, to unite for the sake of the Union, and would withdraw his name at any time from the Presidential canvass if necessary. It was a strong union speech, and looks like paving the way for a complete fusion in the empire State, the great battle ground for the next Presidency; and the ablest speakers of the several political parties, are to be put there to turn the scale in their favor. But little credence can be given by newspaper accounts of New York politics; and the uncertainty as to who will be our next President by no means diminishes as the day of election draws near.

THE PRINCE. Yes, the Prince is coming to Quincy, so they say. Well, why shouldn't he come? we have many curiosities here, and have produced at the foot of our granite hills as great men, physically and intellectually, as he may possibly become. But what is he really coming for, is the question. O, that's hard telling, but we presume to examine the hard and choice things at the depot. What things? what depot, the railroad? No, no; Caleb Packard's extensive dry goods depot. Pugh! what's does he want there? Why to see the smiling and beaming countenance of an honest merchant, (a thing quite hard to find, you know,) who sells his goods cheap for cash.

ONCE MORE. The last excursion of the season by the Nelly Baker will take place on Monday, Sept. 17th. This Boat is the best of any, if we are a judge, that has carried parties from the Point this season; the officers are gentlemen; and as it is the last chance, improve kind readers the opportunity.

NEW STORE. It gives us pleasure to call the attention of our citizens to the new store recently opened on Washington street, by Mr. Harris. His goods, generally, are of an excellent quality, and his lard and molasses are a little superior to what we usually find. All are offered at quite reasonable prices, which, in these hard times, is truly an object to the poor and needy. Those who give this store a visit will undoubtedly be quite pleased with the result.

RUSSIA SALVE. This salve is acknowledged to be one of the best now in use, and will cure corns, bunions, chilblains, and is an excellent remedy for all kinds of cuts, wounds, &c. For sale everywhere for 25 cents a box.

C. Gill & Co. have a fresh case of Men's fine Black Mole Skin Hats, Fall style, very handsome.

The Democratic Party.

"Democrats! Be true to your own party organization, and leave those who do not like it to form a better one if they can."

MR. EDITOR:—I find the above wise, and patriotic advice in the "Boston Post" of April 2d. Coming from a paper which has assumed the leadership of the party, and exercised a wide spread influence among the Democracy in this, and other states, it is natural that such counsel would be cordially received and followed. The Democrats of this State have done so; they have endorsed the nominees of the regular Democratic National Convention, and have presented for the suffrages of the people of Massachusetts, the Democratic Candidates nominated at the regular Democratic State Convention. But the "Post" has not acted upon the advice given above. For some reason which it endeavors to argue in its columns, it bolted the Candidate, and Platform of the Democracy, and not liking either, it has gone "to form a better one if it can." The few persons who follow its teachings in Quincy are misled by the poor pretence that Mr. Douglas is not the regular nominee, forgetting the fact that there was but one Democratic Convention, called by the Chairman of the National Democratic Committee at Charleston, (S. C.) which met and adjourned to Baltimore. Mr. Breckinridge, the Post's Bolter, is the nominee of a Convention of seceders, and outsiders, called at Richmond, (Va.), and not recognized by any regular party organization whatever. In its efforts to create a better party than the old one, the Post has called a bolting State ticket has been made up, in opposition to the regular Convention at Springfield. The Springfield Convention was called by the Chairman and Secretaries of the State Committee, and Delegates were chosen at the regular Democratic meetings called by the party organizations in the several Cities and Towns of the state. In no instance has the regular discipline of the party been departed from, and the nominee stands before the People of this state as the Representative of the Democrats who voted for Pierce and Buchanan. How does the nominee of the Post and Custom House stand? The Convention was called by some unauthorized outsiders, in a different place from the regular one. It was attended by Delegates whom nobody sent, and nominated a ticket whom nobody will vote for.

This town is a fair sample of the modus operandi by which great things are accomplished by small means. Some person circulated himself among a very few particular friends, and invited them to call and see him on an evening—some four or five came, and they saw a sheet of paper, pen and ink, three copies of the Campaign Post, and a lamp—Who was Chairman of the meeting, or Secretary, history does not say, but time which revealed the secrets of the Holy Alliance, and other great transactions, will, doubtless, shed light on this momentous action.

If the Post, and its followers, have a wish to make a new party, no one has any right to complain. If they consider the Democratic party wrong, they do well to be against it; but they have no right to call themselves Democrats, and act thus in open rebellion, against the Principles, Candidates, and discipline of the old Democratic Party. They may be "Breckinridge men," or "Lincoln men," or "Wide Awakes," or "Anti Douglas men," or any man's men they choose, but they cannot call themselves Democrats—Suppose Jackson had walked into Tremont Temple while Mr. Hallett was speaking, how foolish the orator would look. How he would writhe under the gaze of the old Hero.

It is not yet too late for the Post to repent, and return to the old standard it has borne aloft so long. Its poor deluded followers are very few and easily convinced, so that the undoings of the mischief it has achieved as yet, will not be a Herculean work. Such a course will enable them all to join with light hearts in the rejoicings which will follow a Democratic victory.

A DEMOCRAT.

POLITICAL. At a meeting recently held at the Town Hall, by the National Americans of this town, Jeffrey R. Brackett was chosen Chairman, and William S. Perry Secretary, a committee of nine was appointed to make arrangements for the formation of a club, and to unfurl the banner of the Union.

THE MECHANICS' EXHIBITION. This fair at the Faneuil and Quincy Halls, is now open, and possesses unusual attractions for visitors. It affords one of the most amusing and profitable entertainments, as it enables all to examine the works of the great inventive genius of the age, in Art, Science, Mechanics and Manufactures.

OUR SCHOOLS. The long vacation of the Public Schools of Quincy, having closed, the pupils entered upon the Fall term, on Monday, 3d instant, under good auspices. The town's appropriation for the support of our schools is liberal and with our excellent Teachers and General School Committee, the true interests of education cannot fail to be promoted.

THE POLITICAL BALL IN MOTION. The Republicans of this town threw to the breeze on Monday last, a beautiful flag, with the names of Lincoln and Hamlin, emblazoned thereon. We had the honor of passing under its ample folds, and observed thirty-three stars sparkling amidst the stripes; intended, we presume, to represent the number of States, or it may be, the number of electoral votes they expect to get.

We hear that others are soon to be raised as an ornament to our public square. Well, there is room; who will follow next?

POLITICAL. Hon. Charles Francis Adams, M. C., recently addressed a large assemblage, in Philadelphia, in advocacy of the election of Lincoln and Hamlin. His address was eloquent and well received. Rumor says, that he is soon to visit the West on a political tour with Hon. Wm. H. Seward.

[By request.]

POLITICAL. Hon. J. Brooks of New York, in his speech at Augusta on the 29th ult., made the following frank appeal:

"What can, what ought to be done in this grave crisis? Nothing less, in my judgment, than the union and combination of all the truly patriotic into one compact organization, can successfully resist and overthrow this sectional party. Can it not be done, and our glorious Union be preserved? We have done it in the State of New York, and you surely are not less patriotic and self-sacrificing than we. Abandon then, your principles—Americans, Conservatives, Whigs—for this once, and vote for Stephen A. Douglas!"

The abandonment of principles is doubtless a very short road into the Douglas camp, but the Americans and Conservative Whigs ought to drink of the waters of Lethe before they enter upon it. Can the former forget that Douglas has been a life-long and bitter opponent of their party and principles, and that he is the pet of Bishop Hughes and of the Irish Catholics? Can the Whigs who believe the Union is in danger from slavery agitation forget that Douglas instigated the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and reopened the agitation of the slavery question?

Journal.

LECTURE. We learn that Daniel Allen, who is familiarly known as the Norfolk Farmer, is to lecture to-morrow, Sunday evening, at the Town Hall, at 7 o'clock, on the subject of Temperance, to which the public generally are invited to attend.

HIGH TIDES. Our farmers on the line of the Neponset River, have suffered severely by the late tides. Tons of hay, which were stacked on the marshes, have been lifted from their foundations and carried far out to sea. In one case, a lot of tools, which had been left behind, in a stack, for safe keeping, broke from its moorings, and was carried by the current beyond the reach of human redemption. Among the sufferers, one poor wretch lost a well filled flask of prime old Bourbon—which had been laid away for future use; he is inconsolable.

Ladies and Misses are invited to examine C. Gill & Co.'s fine serge congress boots, silk and cotton gore, with and without heels, made to order and warranted.

Two hundred and eighty-two men are employed to clean the streets of the city of New York, at a cost of over five thousand dollars a week.

A GREAT BLESSING TO THE AFFLICTED. The number and formidable character of diseases of the Liver have long challenged the attention of medical men. Some of these diseases, classed under the general term of Consumption, have been supposed incurable, and the unhappy patient allowed to die, without medical science to offer him a hope of recovery. Happily this can no longer be the case. A remedy has been found that will cure complaints, of whatever character, arising from derangement of the Liver.

The Pills discovered by Dr. M. Lane, prepared solely by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa., act directly on the Liver; and by correcting its operation and purifying it from disease, cut off and extirpates the complaints which have their origin in the diseases of this organ. Remedies hitherto proposed for liver complaints, have failed to operate upon the seat of the disease; but Dr. M. Lane's Pills make themselves felt upon the action of the Liver, and by cleansing the fountain, dry up the impure streams which thence derive their existence.

Purchasers will be careful to ask for Dr. M. Lane's celebrated Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa. All other Liver Pills in comparison are worthless. Dr. M. Lane's genuine Vermifuge, also his celebrated Liver Pills, can now be had at all respectable drug stores. None genuine without the signature of Fleming Bros.

Popped Corn

One autumn night, when the wind was high,
And the rain fell in heavy plashes,
A little boy sat by the kitchen fire
A popping corn in the ashes:
And his sister, a curly-haired child of three,
Sat looking on, just close to his knee.
The blast went howling round the house,
As if to get in 'twas trying:
It rattled the latch of the outer door,
Then it seemed a baby crying:
Now and then a drop down the chimney came,
And spluttered and hissed in the bright red flame.
Pop! pop! and the kernels, one by one,
Came out of the embers flying:
The boy held a long pole-stick in his hand,
And kept it busily flying:
He started the corn, and it snapped the more,
And faster jumped to the clean swept floor.
Part of the kernels hopped out one way,
And a part hopped out the other;
Some flew plump into the sister's lap,
Some down the stool of the brother:
The little girl gathered them into a heap,
And called them a flock of milk-white sheep.
All at once the boy sat as still as a mouse,
And into the fire kept gazing:
He quivered for he was popping corn,
For he looked where the fire was blazing:
He looked, and he fancied that he could see
A house and a barn, a bird and a tree.
Still steadily gazed the boy at those,
And his sister's back kept stroking:
Till his sister cried out: "Why, George,
Only see how the corn is smoking!"
And sure enough, when the boy looked back,
The corn in the ashes were burnt quite black.

By the River

BY MRS. EMELINE S. SMITH

Lake-ships upon a favoring tide
Calms the passing moments glide
To one who haply dwells beside
This fair and flowing river:
The summer rose blooms brightest here:
The robin's song rings out more clear;
And life has meaning rich and dear
Beside this beautiful river.

As a fond parent oft portrays
Her petted darling's pretty ways,
So Nature, every hour, displays
The charms of this bright river:
Morn laughs to see her own fair face
Depicted in the limpid space,
And evening smiles with tender grace
Upon this tranquil river.

The freighted clouds that sail on high,
Or moored in heaven's blue harbors lie,
Bring diamond tributes from the sky
To swell the flowing river:
The misty winds that o'er it sweep,
With dancing waves a revel keep,
And waft a music wild and deep
From out this tuneful river.

The hills, that elsewhere darkly frown,
Put on green robes or floral crown,
And take soft shapes as they stoop down
To meet the smiling river:
The midnight stars that gleam in the west
Wake holiest thoughts of peace and rest,
And tell of regions still more blest
Beyond this shining river!

Stray Gems of Poesy.

Too much of joy brings sorrow,
Too cares must needs abound;
The vine that bears too many flowers,
Will trail upon the ground.

The night is mother of the day,
The water of the spring;
And ever upon old decay,
The greenest mosses cling.

Behind the cloud the star light lurks;
Through showers the sunbeams fall;
For God who loveth all his works,
Has left his hope with all.

Doubting always makes us weaker—
Fear moves clouds of gloom;
But the true and earnest seeker,
Knows no terror nor no gloom.

Then glad up with bold endeavor,
Ever onward while you may,
Keep your trust and hope forever—
Providence shall guide the way.

Anecdotes.

An eccentric wealthy gentleman struck up a board in a field upon his estate, upon which was painted the following:
I will give this field to any man who is contented.

He soon had an applicant.
Well, sir, are you a contented man?
Yes, sir, very.

Then what do you want with my field?
The applicant did not stop to reply.

Aunt Emily was trying to persuade little Eddy to retire at sundown, using as an argument that the little chickens went to roost at that time.

Yes, said Eddy; but the old hen always goes with them.

How is your husband, dear? asked one lady of another.
Oh, he's in a very bad state!
And pray, what kind of a state is he in?
Still persisted the enquirer.

In the state pison.

A red-nosed gentleman asked a wit whether he believed in spirits.
Ay, sir, replied he, looking him full in the face, I see too much evidence before me to doubt that.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and languid? Do you feel oppressed, and your system deranged, and your feelings uncontrolled? Do you feel a general debility, and a general depression, and a general loss of energy? Do you feel a general loss of appetite, and a general loss of sleep, and a general loss of vitality? Do you feel a general loss of health, and a general loss of strength, and a general loss of power? Do you feel a general loss of life, and a general loss of hope, and a general loss of faith? Do you feel a general loss of everything, and a general loss of all?

A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs the natural functions. These, if not relieved, upon themselves and the surrounding organs, produce general depression, suffering, and disease. In this condition, oppressed by the derangements, Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the action of the system, and with it the vigor of health again. What is true and so apparent in the case of the system, is also true in the case of the individual. The derangements of the system, and the derangements of the individual, are caused by similar causes. They are rapidly and surely cured by Ayer's Pills. None who know the virtues of these pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the derangements of the system, and the derangements of the individual, and from other well known public places.

Norfolk Agricultural Society.

CATTLE SHOW & FAIR.

THE OFFICERS AND TRUSTEES

Norfolk Agricultural Society,
Respectfully announce to the public that their Twelfth Annual Exhibition

WILL TAKE PLACE

ON

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY,

The 27th and 28th of September.

EXTENSIVE arrangements have been made to increase the attractions of the occasion, and it is confidently expected that the Exhibition of the present season will prove equal in interest, variety and extent, to that of any former year.

The grounds of the Society afford ample accommodations for the proper reception and exhibition of Horses, Stock, &c., and the spacious Hall possesses all the requisite facilities for the display of Flowers, Fruits, Vegetables and articles of Domestic Manufacture.

The exhibition of Horses will be on an extensive scale, the grounds having been carefully prepared for the purpose, and placed under the charge of a competent and responsible committee, of which Arthur W. Austin of West Roxbury, is Chairman. It is believed that the show of Horses will exceed that of any former exhibition of the Society, as the presence of many of the finest horses for which the County has become noted, has been promised by their respective owners.

There will be an exhibition of the various classes of Horses, followed by trials of speed, under the direction of the Committee. Seats, capable of accommodating one thousand persons, have been provided.

In consequence of the disturbed state of the public mind with reference to the Cattle Disease, the Trustees have deemed it prudent to dispense with the Cattle department of the exhibition, so far as the award of premiums is concerned, but at the earnest desire of many members of the Society, Arthur W. Austin has consented to send his imported herd of Kerry Cattle for exhibition only, and it is expected that a numerous herd of the progeny of the famous Bull, Jamestown, will also be offered for exhibition. A cordial invitation is extended to all owners of choice stock, who are willing to exhibit them on the Fair Grounds without premium. Suitable provision will be made for the accommodation of Cattle, Swine, poultry, &c.

For similar reasons, in the department of plowing for this year, horse teams have been substituted for those usually drawn by oxen, for which the following increased premiums have been offered:

Double teams, consisting of three or four horses, with Michigan plow, first premium, $15; second, $12; third, $9.

Single teams, consisting of two horses, first premium, $12; second, $10; third, $8; fourth, $6.

THURSDAY will be devoted to the reception and examination of articles for premium, and will also be the day for the exhibition of the various classes of Horses, followed by trials of speed, under the direction of the Committee. Seats, capable of accommodating one thousand persons, have been provided.

FRIDAY will be the grand Exhibition Day, the exercises of which will be as follows:

Plowing Match, 9-12, A. M.
Spading Match, 9-12, A. M.
Cavalade of all the Horses on Exhibition, at 10 o'clock.

At 11-12 o'clock, a Procession will be formed on the grounds, under the direction of Col. Charles H. French of Canton, Chief Marshal of the day, which will proceed to Agricultural Hall, on the Society's grounds, where the Dinner will take place at 12 o'clock, M., after which the exercises will be resumed.

The Address will be given by Hon. GEORGE S. HILLARD. Speeches will also be made by Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, Hon. GEORGE MANSFORD, Delegate from the State Board, and other gentlemen.

Grand Exhibition of Horses, under the direction of a competent committee will commence at 2 o'clock, P. M., precisely, and continue till 6 o'clock, when the exercises of the day will conclude.

The sum of $100 has been presented to the Society, to be awarded as follows, in Special Premiums for the best Driving Horses, regard being had to style, action, docility and bottom:

First class, Stallions of all ages, first premium, $20; second premium, $20.

Second Class, all other horses of all ages, first premium, $30; second premium, $20.

ADMISSION FEES.

SINGLE TICKETS, admitting to the Hall, 15 cts.
SINGLE TICKETS, admitting to the Grounds 15 cts.
SEASONS TICKETS, (not transferable) admitting to all departments of the Exhibition, throughout the entire day, 50 cts.

West District—Quincy.

A BRIEF NOTICE OF THE ORIGIN—PRESENT CONDITION AND FUTURE PROSPECTS OF THE "HALL CEMETERY," IN THE WEST DISTRICT, IN QUINCY.

It will be seen by the map of Quincy, that the Hall Cemetery is located near the geographical centre of the town. It is about four miles distant from Canton line, four from Squantum, and about the same from Hoogh's Neck.

It contains about two acres of land, and was given by Mr. James Hall, for a Free Burying Ground for all persons residing in that part of the Town. The natural beauties of the Ground appear to be all that could be desired—and it is interesting to cultivated minds on account of the antiquities it contains. Two centuries ago it was the seat of the Iron Works then carried on—many relics of which still remain. There are the remains of the Old Furnace, where the Ore was melted. Large quantities of Iron Ore, Coal Dust, and Cinders still remain. The Flame, or Race-Way, below the Dam, made of oak timber and plank, and cut through in digging a drain—with remnants of two wheelbarrows, were also found. A cellar still remains, supposed to be that of the Boarding House, and a knife of curious shape—much rusted—was dug up near this cellar.

The erection of the Bunker Hill Monument, and the building of the first Railroad in the country, with other great works going on at the time, brought together great numbers of men and families—all subject to casualties and loss of life, and it was found that some place of interment was much needed.

The ground for the present Cemetery with a thousand dollars to fence it, was accordingly given in trust, to persons associated according to law for the purpose.

A part of the ground was laid out for family lots, and a part left as common ground. The proceeds of the sale of lots, according to law, goes for the improvement of the ground, and for no other purpose. About thirty lots have been sold, and the proceeds applied as intended. Nearly one hundred and fifty remain unsold, which may furnish the means of future improvement. The whole expense of fencing and grading to the present time, is about seventeen hundred dollars; of which Mr. Hall gave one thousand.

The sale of lots amounted to about four hundred and fifty dollars—and two hundred and fifty was borrowed among the Associates. No assessment has been laid for eighteen years, and there has been but one voluntary subscription for the improvements of the walks, and consequently, they will not compare with those of Mount Auburn or Forest Hill.

Monuments have been erected by a number who own lots. A large fragment has been set up as a Central Monument. It is a huge Column, about four and a half feet in diameter—thirty feet high, and of about thirty tons weight. It seems to fit its place—in keeping with the geological features of the District and business of the place; and, like "Stone Henge" on Salisbury Plain, may remain as conclusive evidence of the existence at some former period, of a people, somewhat rude but not wanting in energy.

This place of Interment has hitherto supplied a pressing and inevitable want of the community; a want common to all mankind at the end of their labors—a place of rest. Ninety-one interments may be counted: fifty-two on family lots—twenty-four on common ground, and fifteen in tombs.

A large proportion of the people of the District are Catholics, having two Cemeteries, and a less number, old residents, having rights in other places.

The Hall Cemetery was intended for all residents of the District belonging to the human family, without regard to sect, and to remain as long as Cemeteries are wanted. The ground has latent resources—if well managed—sufficient to give it a high finish, and with the natural beauties of the site, to render it an enviable place; for which the thanks of the community are in justice due to Mr. JAMES HALL, the munificent donor.

For the Patriot

Excursion of the "Seventeens"

POINT ALBERTON, AUG. 22th, 1860.

On the 18th Aug., 1860, the "Seventeens" started for their "Annual Camping Expedition." They arrived upon the ground about 12 o'clock, pitched their tents, prepared for arrivals and to live. The supper was excellent, and the "Seventeens" with invited guests did honor to it. The most important event of the first day was the rescue of the "Chicken" after learning to sing "Don't Give Her Ben," which she sung quite lustily; but, alas, too late, for he was landed in the midst of sea-weed, perch and boat-fixings,— but with the help of "Jimmy," all were safely brought to land.

The next day, things were in pretty good sailing trim, and everything passed pleasantly to all concerned.

The following morning, came the departures, and the unexpected arrival of the "Essence Pedler;" he met with a warm reception, and was speedily disposed of by "Tom;" the odor of the visit lasted throughout the day; it was hard to shake off; here the company remained in quiet rest, for social converse, until the Nantasket left for Boston with the Sunday guests.

Monday was quiet and still; all were out hunting for a "Poor Peep," but could not find one; they were undoubtedly frightened by the arrival of "Camp Jocos." With a good night's rest—rose with the sun—breakfasted, and pretty soon espied teams heading round "Strawberry Hill;" the company was large, and turned out to be the "Curtis's Pic-Nic." Received some calls in the morning, and in the afternoon returned them; where we met with many friends who hailed from home; departed richly laden with luxuries, which those on the "Desert" know how to appreciate. In the evening, visited Hall; amused ourselves with "Bowling" and dancing the new "Polka" arranged for the especial benefit of a guest of the "Seventeens;" arrived in Camp and found that we had a narrow escape from fire; retired to dream of the dance at Hall.

Wednesday, rose with the fog and had a day of rest, until the midnight arrivals—then all was life and bustle again; "Bell and Everett" was round watching the motions of a "Traveling Newspaper," causing considerable alarm and a general stampede for outside berths; after some delay, the visitor was chased across the plain by the "Tinker," "Chicken" and "Cook," and finally immolated by the "Chicken," to the general delight of the "Clerk" and "B. & E."

On the following evening, visited the new arrival, "Camp Quincy;" passed a merry evening, and retired about 1 o'clock.

Thursday, received visits from the Esquire and Lady, Miss T., Messrs. B. and F. and Ladies; also, entertained a large "Pic-Nic" party, which furnished amusement enough for the day. Take it all in all,

"We needn't shall see the like again."

In the evening received two "Lodgers," and passed an agreeable time—at a late hour sought our comforters, to dream of better shooting. Being doomed to disappointment, our next achievement was a race over the Plain after the "Guy" which the "Heifer" stole from our Sleeping Tent; the race was a spirited one; all the members of the "Seventeens" were engaged in it; but "B. & F." were again victorious—securing the "Guy" and repairing damages.

SEPT. 5TH: One week in Camp, and all well. "Bell and Everett" out shooting; boys gunning, fishing or claiming. Visitors arrived in the Nantasket; and now commences lively times; first, "Zouave Drill" by "Nantasket Cadets," Capt H. and Sergeant T.—then a visit to "Camp Quincy;" here we had a narrow escape from being shot; return home with some members and visitors from "Camp Quincy;" enjoyed ourselves finely—extend the right-hand of fellowship to them, and separate with hearty congratulations and parting salutations; the ceremony was most effecting—I could not respond—I was overwhelmed by my feelings; at this point, three faint echoes of "Josh," for the "Camp of Quincy," was heard, followed by six hearty "Zouave" cheers for the "Seventeens;" thus closed the festivities of the day.

Thanks are due the Esquire and his Lady for the bountiful supply of the good things of life, which were duly appreciated at "small hours."

We separated for the night with pleasant thoughts, to awake in the morning for another "Zouave Drill" on the common; this gave us an appetite for our breakfast—which was speedily despatched, and we were left once more to the solemn stillness of the "Desert;" but the Sabbath brought with it numerous visitors, and before the sun went down we had as many as we could well entertain. They tarried with us during the night, and left at early dawn. Our company was now reduced to three—the fatigues of the campaign put us under constraint—we felt more inclined to sleep than for boisterous exertion; in this happy mood our meditations were interrupted by an unexpected visit from the "Fifer;" he was in happy tune, and entertained us for an hour or more, in the most lively strains, when we pitched two of our tents for early leave-taking on the morrow. At a given signal by "J. H."

"Rouse ye, the Sun is up over the fore-yard." We were soon on our feet, and after refreshing the inner-man on some of the delicacies left over from our repast of the preceding evening, joyfully took up our line of march toward our deserted homes. Thus ended the Camping Expedition of 1860.

Care of the Body.

While riding on a locomotive, and talking with the engineer, as I had the privilege of doing, I could not but think how much wiser men were about iron and steel machinery than they were about flesh and osseous machines. The relation of the pump to the capacity of the boiler; the relation of the furnace to the size of the flues; the relation of the cylinder, or of the steam generated, to the work to be done—all these things were in the engineer's mind. He was continuously watching every part, and opening and shutting valves on every side, so as to keep every part in its proper condition. The stoker, or fireman, was applying or withholding food, so as to keep the engine in just that state in which it would work best, according to whether we were running on an up-grade, or down-grade, or on level ground, and according to the number and weight of the cars being drawn, for we were drawing a long and ponderous train.

Now how many are there who watch their furnace to see that they get in neither too much nor too little fuel? Men shovel in food without any regard to what it is going to do! If it is the Sabbath day, when they are quiescent, when they have less air and exercise than on other days, and when their stomachs are not in a condition to digest as much food as on other days, they eat a double portion. If it is a day when they are to undergo severe taxation and work, and when they can least afford to go without food, oftentimes they become anxious, and neglect to eat because they are so anxious. As a general rule, when the body needs the basis of food less than at any other time, they eat the most, and when it needs more than at any other time, they eat the least. Our food is a means to an end. It is simply the fuel with which we are to raise steam for carrying on the purposes of life. A man should eat as much on principle as he prays.

I have been asked how I could perform so large an amount of work with apparently so little diminution of strength. I attribute my powers of endurance to a long-formed habit of observing, every day of my life, the simple laws of health—and once more the laws of eating. It has become a second nature to me. It ceases any longer to be a matter of self-denial. It is almost like an instinct. If I have a severe tax on my brain in the morning, I cannot eat heartily at breakfast. If the whole day is to be one of nervous exertion, I eat very little till the exertion is over. I know that two forces cannot be concentrated in activity at the same time in one body. I know that when the stomach works, the brain must rest, and that when the brain works, the stomach must rest. If I am going to be moving about out of doors a great deal, then I can give a fuller swing to my appetite—which is never exceedingly bad. But if I am engaged actively and successfully in mental labor, I cannot eat much. And I have made eating with regularity, and with reference to what I have to do so long, that it ceases any longer to be a subject of thought. It almost takes care of itself. I attribute much of my ability to endure work, to good habits of eating, and constant attention to the laws of sleep, physical exercise, and general cheerfulness.

This is one thing more to be said in this connection. It is not a matter of epicureanism that a man should be dainty concerning the food he eats. On the contrary, I hold that a civilized man ought to be civilized in his cookery. I attribute much of the unhealthy state which exists among men to the abominable stuff which they take into their stomachs. They are not responsible, perhaps, for the adulterated articles of food which issue from the purgatory of a city store. They may not be responsible for the poison that is palmed upon them over the counter, along with the necessities of life—along with things they are obliged to have. But indifference as to the condition of things which we eat—in other words, the want of Christianity in cooking—is a very fertile cause of sickness and suffering. I suppose one of the infallible signs of the millennium will be a better regulated kitchen—a kitchen that sends out food that will not make Christian men sick!—H. W. Beecher.

Boiling Potatoes.

Let the potatoes lie in cold water six or eight hours before boiling (twelve hours for very old ones is not too long). Then put them into boiling water a little salted, and the water should be kept at a moderate boil till they are done, which should be tested with a fork; then pour off the water and let them stand in the pot till dry. Great care should be taken not to let them boil a moment after they are done, as it will render them watery. An excellent plan to make potatoes mealy, is to turn them into a cloth and slightly press them. The larger potatoes should be put into the pot before smaller ones, that they may be equally done. It requires from forty to fifty minutes. New ones will take about half that time.

[By request.]

To the Supporters of Bell and Everett

The attention of the honest supporters of John Bell for President, and Edward Everett for Vice President, is invited to the following extracts from a speech recently delivered by the Hon. RICHARD W. THOMPSON, of Indiana, one of the founders of the Constitutional Union Party, and one of the ablest public men of the West. Friends of the CONSTITUTION, THE UNION, AND THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAWS, read and ponder!

"When we made our nomination of Mr. Bell at Baltimore, there was an implied agreement resting upon all of us, that we would support the ticket straight through, 'live or die, sink or swim, survive or perish.' We were to stand by that nomination, because we considered the Democrats and Republicans both wrong. There was an implied agreement that we would stand under that flag that had inscribed on its folds 'the Constitution, the Union, and the Enforcement of the Laws.' (Applause.) But, from some cause, gentlemen in different parts of the country have supposed that they have a right to change that agreement.

"Instead of fighting Douglas, Breckinridge, and Lincoln, some gentlemen have seen fit to make a little private agreement with the Douglas men that they will tie together to see if the two cannot, by uniting, effect something in the Presidential election. The people of the United States are a confiding people, and are generally jealous of their rights. Just so soon as they began to suspect that the politicians were making trades for the Presidency, they inquired if it was not time to take the voting into their own hands, and they will do it. If Mr. Lincoln be elected to the Presidency, these political traders are responsible for it. I never made a trade in politics with any body. If there lives a man who knows that I ever made a political bargain, I give him perfect license to expose it. If there shall be a President elected by political bargains, I wash my hands of it. I have no such bargains to make. When the Democratic party was in its prime, and exulted in the fact that we were low at its feet, I was unwilling to bargain with it, and now when it lies dead and bleeding, I am unwilling to be tied to its corpse—I will not be. (Great applause.) I will stand by the faith that I have always maintained, and will adhere to the honest convictions of my judgment. If I cannot have the man for President whom I desire, I will be content with letting the people select the man of their choice, and will not dissolve the Union because I cannot have my way.—(Applause.) I am a Union man, and I believe you are Union men, too. (Renewed applause.) I would greatly prefer to see Mr. Bell elected, but he never shall be elected with my consent, nor shall any other man, by a bargain with Mr. Douglas and his friends, or with Mr. Breckinridge and his friends.—(Applause.) I will make no bargains with them. I have fought them all my life.—When they were a strong and compact party I fought them, and am still willing to fight them, whether they come in single platoons, or as an allied army. (Applause.) Why, how would a ticket look made up of half Americans and half Douglas men? Is it possible there is a man who was ever a Know Nothing would consent to such an arrangement?"

"If they could again form an alliance with these Breckinridge men and unite the Democracy, they would turn upon the Union men as fiercely as ever, and denounce them, as they have denounced us all, with all the opprobrious epithets in the language. I shall stand by the Union flag, and 'Squatter Sovereignty,' with my consent, shall never be one of its mottoes. (Applause.)

"The four candidates having been nominated in the manner I have stated, I wish it was so that all the people in the North, and the Union men in the South, could look at this thing as I do, and see the necessity of uniting upon some man for President, who, like Mr. Bell, stands upon a platform neither sectional nor ultra

Poetry.

My Private Opinions.

Mankind are no better than robbers,
And Charity proves but a lie;
Salvation is doled out by jobbers;
Benevolence's all in your eye.

Friendship—a thing of convenience;
Happiness does not exist;
Hope—something far in the distance;
Honor—a prize-fighter's fist.

Contentment is found in the gutter,
And Wealth comes of robbing the poor;
Trust steals all the bread and the butter
From every grocery store.

True Greatness is being successful,
No matter how wrong or how right;
True Love, while it lasts, is quite blisful,
But it seldom remains over night.

Slander is something quite common;
Where it touches it raises a blister;
It's much used by every true woman
Who is anxious to help a "frail sister."

True Virtue a sorry old maid is,
Whose looks keep temptations away,
While fashion makes all our fair ladies
Who live but to make a display.

Poverty's the worst of all evils;
"Twit keep you in bondage to life,
Change all your relations to—devils
And make a poor slave of your wife—

Your children are objects of pity;
Aristocracy christens them "brats,"
They are kicked about over the city
Like so many troublesome rats.

Christianity dwells where the steeple
Lifts up its form tall towards heaven,
And belongs to a privileged people
Who are christians just one day in seven.

Religion is something too holy
For common mankind to possess;
It is with the meek and the lowly
Who do something more than "profess."

Deception is found in all places;
It's confined to no section or class;
We all have its mark on our faces;
To prove it—just look in the glass!

The Worth of Hours

Believe not that your inner eye
Can ever in just measure try
The worth of hours as they go by;

For every man's weak self, alas!
Makes him to see them as they pass,
As through a dim or tinted glass.

But if in earnest care you would
Mote out to each its part of good,
Trust rather to your after mood.

Those surely are not fairly spent
That leave your spirit bowed and bent
In sad unrest and ill content.

And more; though free from seeming harm,
You rest from toil of mind or arm,
Or slow retire from Pleasure's charm;

If then a painful scene comes on,
Of something wholly lost and gone,
Vainly enjoyed or vainly done;

Of something from your being's chain
Broke off not to be linked again
By all mere memory can retain;

Upon your heart this truth may rise;
Nothing that altogether dies
Suffices man's just destinies.

So should we live that every hour
May die, as does the natural flower,
A self-reviving thing of power;

That every hour and every deed
May hold within itself the seed
Of future good or future need.

Esteeming sorrow, whose employ,
Is to develop, not to destroy,
Far better than a barren joy.

Autumn.

Bright flowers are sinking,
Streamlets are shrinking,
Now the wide forest is wither'd and drear;
Light clouds are flying,
Soft winds are sighing:
We will be thoughtful, for autumn is near.

Blossoms we cherish'd
Have wither'd and perish'd,
Scenes which we smiled on are yellow and drear;
Feelings of sadness
O'ershadow our gladness,
And make the mind thoughtful, for autumn is near.

Thus all that is fairest,
And sweetest and rarest,
Must shortly be sever'd and call for a tear;
Then let each emotion
Be warm with devotion,
And we will be thoughtful, for autumn is near.

Anecdotes.

A midshipman asked a priest to tell him
the difference between a priest and a jackass.
The priest gave it up.

One wears a cross on his back, and the other on his breast, said the midshipman.

Now, said the priest, tell me the difference between a midshipman and a jackass.

The midshipman gave it up, and asked why it was. The priest said he didn't know of any.

A poor man of Greenock, Scotland, applied to a magistrate to have two of his children admitted on the poor's roll.

How many have you? said the bailie.
Five and twenty.

All by one wife?
O no, sir, I am wearing the fourth.

May I please your honor, said a lawyer, addressing the judge. I brought the prisoner from jail on a habes corpus.

Well, said a fellow in an undertone, who stood in the rear of the court, these lawyers will say anything! I saw the man get out of a cab at the door.

A rich man told a poor man that he worked to get a stomach for his meat.
And I, said the poor man, work to get meat for my stomach.

Miscellaneous.

Squire Richer's Cow.

"ALL'S FAIR IN TRADE."—Speculator's Bille.

Good lookin' cow, that, Squire Rich. Want to sell?

Wall, I duuno. Want to buy?

That depends on the price. What'll you sell her for?

Make me an offer.

Wall, I 'spose she's worth eighteen or twenty dollars. Somewhere about that.

Eighteen or twenty dollars? Loud soul. Mr. Smith? Why, that cow is the real Durham-Cheshire-Short-Horn—the best breed in the world, you know.

Sho! you don't say so, though, do ye?

Strange, now, I didn't notice it. Come from the town of Short Horn, eh?

Loud soul, no, Mr. Smith. She was owned by a man of the name of Short Horny, and they called her Short-Horn, you know, cause Horny was too long to speak. The man that raised her was English or Irish, I forget which. So you see the cow's a furrier. I reported her myself from the Continent.

Sho! Why, I never ha' heard a word of it. Kept it private, didn't ye Squire?

Wall, yes, rather. Ye see it's the times of the Know Nothing agitation, and ye know I'm a candidate for Selectman in my town, so I was afraid if the people found out here I'd turn right out and spite my election. You know they're down on furriers.

Wall, I declare, Squire, you're sharp. But the cow can speak—that is, roar English, can't she?

Sartin! Just like any other cow. And now, neighbor Smith, if you want to buy a grand good cow, one that'll give twenty-five quarts of milk a day, and make ten pounds of butter a week, you'll never have another such a chance, I wouldn't part with her at no price to any other man, but you and I have allers been good friends, and I don't mind sacrificin' a few paltry dollars to oblige you. You may have that Durham-Cheshire-Short Horn Cow, bred somewhere in Victoria's dominions, for the sum of forty-five dollars, dog-gone!

Forty-five dollars! Oh! Squire, you must think I'm made of money. I never can afford to give that. Say forty, and I'll think about it.

Wall, Mr. Smith, you're a tight hand at a bargain, but I won't stand with you for a few paltry dollars. You may have the cow for forty.

The cow's yours.

The cow's yours.

There, reader, that's the way Mr. John Smith happened to become the owner of the Durham-Cheshire-Short-Horn Parren-Cow, reported from the Continent by James Richer, Justice of the Peace for Stratford County, State of New Hampshire. Now, for further particulars.

Mr. Smith drove his purchase home, much elated with the acquisition, and when night came, he would not permit his daughter Jane to milk the Short-Horn with the other cows, he must perform the pleasurable and highly interesting job himself. Mr. Smith established himself on a three legged stool at the side of the Short Horn, and placing a fifteen quart wooden pail at the proper angle, commenced the process. In less than a second he had the pail brim full, for the Short-Horn, not probably relishing the slow old fashioned method of filling the pail with milk, concluded to save Mr. Smith considerable trouble, and accordingly set both her hind feet into the devoted pail, giving Mr. Smith a smart whisk with her stub tail at the same time!

Mr. Smith tried to dislodge the obtruding feet, but to his surprise he found them a fixture. On further examination he ascertained that the feet had quietly knocked out the bottom of the pail, and the legs of the Short-Horn were firmly hooped together. He pulled and hauled at the refractory legs, but all to no purpose; they were bound to stick. So Mr. Smith, as a last resort, applied a hatchet to the pail and rent it in twain. Out flew Short-Horn's understandings, and by way of examination into their safety, she let go first one and then the other which against Mr. Smith's ankle bone. Over went Smith and the three-legged-milk-stool bouncing after him; his head in a fragrant mud-puddle, and his feet elevated in the elastic fluid which surrounds the earth. He screamed to Simon Midway, his hired man to come to the rescue; but Simon was engaged just then in the interesting business of kissing Jane Smith behind the bridle cow she was milking, and it was some time before he responded to the call.

When Mr. Smith was once more raised to the perpendicular, he swore a few easy words, looked sadly at the Durham-Cheshire-Short-Horn, and went in to Mrs. Smith to get the wounded limb bound up. From that worthy lady he received but little consolation.

I allers told you, Smith, said she, to keep clear of Squire Richer; he's a tormented speculator and allers will get the best end of a bargain. He got cheated once when he married his wife, and that's some comfort. He wanted to have me once; but good luck! I'd as soon throw myself into the mill pond and commit regicide. Dear sake, this cloth ain't half big enough to reach round yer leg now. Wait till I sew it together. I allers knowed—it has been beat into me for more'n a year that Squire Richer would get the better of you somehow, and now—

Better of me or not, put in Mr. Smith, as his wife paused for breath, you'll see if I don't fix him. I'll let him know that I ain't a fool yet.

Sho! You don't pretend to say you'll try to cheat him? Remember, Mr. Smith, you're a member of the Church.

I'll fix him, I said—ain't that enuff? I'll have my money back agin' afore next month this time—if I don't, then I'll give you a gown.

Wall, why not tell how you calculate to do it.

Wall, I mean to. Pshaw! a woman can't keep a secret to rest easy without knowin' everything. I'll fix him—that's all.

With a wonderful knowing air, Mr. Smith limped out of the house, and going to the milk-yard, desired Midway to step into the sheep-house with him a minute—he wanted to have a little talk.

Simon, frightened half to death lest the kissing affair behind the bridle cow had been discovered, obeyed with fear and trembling.

Simon, says Smith, coming to the point at once, can you keep a secret?

Yes sir.

Wall, do you love my darter Jane?

How? Ah—hem—oh—oh, Sir! I—I—

Poor Simon's knees began to knock together, and his teeth chattered in his head.

Don't be a fool, Simon, nobody's goin' to kill ye. Speak out.

Yes sir, I do love her. I—

Well, Simon, if you love her, that's well; but if you marry her, you've got to work for her. Will you be willing to do that?

Try, ye—doing me a little service in an affair that I've got into and want to get out of.

Anything in the world Mr. Smith, from fighting a duel to killing a wild cat.

You know Squire Jim Richer?

To be sure.

He's a speculator and cheat you know?

Your Short-Horn Cow shows that plain enough.

That's it exactly, Simon, and to tell the truth, I don't feel over and above well pleased about that bargain, and if I could only get the better of the Squire in some way I should be delighted. I've got a plan fixed that I think will be just the thing, and all I want is you to carry it out for me.

Say on, I am ready for anything, if Jane's to be my reward.

Wall, now harken. The Squire thinks a sight of nice cattle, and will give a most any price afore he'll lose the chance of gettin' a valuable animal. Now, I want you to take some paint—mind and get it the exact shade—and paint Short-Horn's white spots black just like the rest of her.

Then get a sharp file and file her horns off even with her head, and after you've got her fixed, take her into the cars, and don't stop till you get to Boston. After you get there, write me a letter that you are the Earl of Derby's herdsman—an English name takes you know—and that you have come to America a purpose to buy up fine cattle. Pretend that you have heard of me as one that takes a powerful interest in the improvement of stock, and that would like for me to come to Boston, and see a splendid black cow of the no horn breed, which the Earl had sent to the Mayor of Boston as a present. Just hint that, for a consideration, you would be willing to part with her to any American farmer, and palm off an inferior animal upon the Mayor. Do you understand me, Midway?

Perfectly, sir. Go ahead.

Wall, when I see Squire Richer, he'll ask me how I like that Short-Horn, and where she is. I'll tell him that my wife thinks she is a handsome critter, and that I have sent her up into Belknap County for better paturin'. Talking of her will bring in this other affair handy and then I'll show him yer letter and invite him to go to Boston with me to see the celebrated No-Horn. I'll tell him that I'm 'ot on havin' the cow, if he don't cost more than I'm worth, and th'll make him determined to have her himself. You must ask an enormous price for his but fall down a hundred dollars or so, just to make him think he's cheated ye. Now, Simon, do you think you can do the thing upworn?

Yes, yes. If, well, I believe you said something about Jane when you first begun?

So I did. Well, if you can make it go you my have Jane before the cold weather, and to money we get for Short-Horn will help at you up a housekeepin'. Mind though, and keep it all to yourself.

I'll be mum. And off bounded Simon to give Jane an infinite number of busses, as he took to foaming pails from her hand to carry them into the spring room.

The very next morning, before any of the family were stirring, Simon, with the painted cow, as on board the cars for Boston. The next day's mail brought to Mr. Smith, the following letter:

"TO JOHN SMITH, Esq. of Rockhill, Stratford County, (N. H.)

"DEAR SIR: I beg leave to introduce myself as William Bell, the herdsman of the Earl of Derby, Derbyshire, England. I am on a journey through the United States for the purpose of purchasing choice American cattle, the Earl having taken it into his head that a mixture of the English and American breeds is desirable. I have now at the stable or Green Street a magnificent black cow—the no-horn royal stock—which my master has sent by me as a present to his honor the Mayor of Boston. Having heard through your highly respected friend, Richard Stevens, of this place, that you are much interested in the improvement of the American stock, I have thought that it would do no harm to dispose of this no-horn to you, and purchase a good American animal for the Mayor. Of course you understand this is in the disinterested wish of serving American cattle. If you should think it worth your while, I shall be very happy to see you at the American House some time during the present week.

"With the highest respect, your ob't serv't,

"WILLIAM BELL."

HA! HA!!! ha!!! laughed John Smith, as he finished reading the note. Simon's in for it, no mistake. Good—yes, that will do. Now I will harness up and make an errand over to the Squire's after some cabbage plants—he said he had a slew of 'em.

Mr. Smith was soon on the road behind the gray mare, and on arriving at the Squire's he found that worthy man at work in the garden. Mr. Smith tied up his horse and sprang over the fence where his friend was hoeing corn.

Ah, ha! Good morning, good morning, neighbor Smith. Glad to see you. Fine morning.

Capital! the rain night afore last did the ishin' for the crops. Things look flour-

Yes, as well as I've known 'em to be for fourteen years—corn and beans especially.

Why, Smith, the corn on my Gov'nor lot is up to a man's hips.

Sho! Well that is large. But how about them cabbage plants? Got any to spare, eh?

Plenty of 'em, Mr. Smith; there is that bed. Help yourself. Oh! (after a brief pause,) I forgot to ask you about the cow. How do you like her?

First rate, Squire, but our pasturin' is so poor, that I've sent her up to Alton to my brother to be pastured—his pasturing is new land, you know, and the clover knee deep, he says. I was afraid if I kept her here she'd kinder lose her flesh and run down, so I've let him have her for the season, and he's to allow me for the milk and butter.

The Squire looked somewhat surprised at this favorable account of the Durham-Cheshire-Short-Horn, but he only said:

Just as I thought, Mr. Smith. I knew you'd be pleased with the cow.

There was a long pause, during which Smith was industriously uprooting cabbage plants and transferring them to his basket. At length, as if struck with a new idea, he called out:

Look here, Squire, I'm a good mind to tell you a little bit of a secret. Do you think you could keep still about it?

Sutin! Land me, I can keep anything secret. Let's know.

Well, Squire, I'm goin' to have a cow that'll put every other cow in Stratford County nowhere.

How? Explain.

There, read that. Mr. Smith pulled Simon's letter from his pocket.

The Squire read it over carefully, and when he had finished, he exclaimed:

Grand chance, I declare. Come right straight from the Earl of Derby's; and you mean to buy her, don't ye?

Yes, sir. If the cow don't go beyond two hundred dollars, she's mine.

The Squire seemed cogitating.

Look here, Smith, said he, at length, I'd like to see this famous cow. How would you like to have my company down to Boston?

The very thing I was going to ask you. I want the benefit of your advice about the critter. I ain't much of a judge of cattle.

There was a long conversation between the two worthies there in the cabbage yard, and it was agreed that they should proceed together the following morning to Boston to examine and decide on the merits of the wonderful cow.

Soon of the next day found Squire Richer and Mr. Smith at Boston, when they immediately sought Green Street stable and the

No-Horn. Both the cow and Simon Midway were so thoroughly disguised, that their owners would not have known them, (particularly No-Horns,) and Squire Richer was completely deceived. To cut a long matter short, after much bargaining and bantering the No-Horn Earl of Derby cow, alias, the Durham-Cheshire-Short-Horn, became the property of Squire Richer—he paying as an equivalent the sum of two hundred and seventy-five dollars.

Mr. Smith, was, to all appearance, almost heart-broken at the loss of the splendid chance; but he hadn't money enough he said to pay for her at that price.

So Squire Richer's cow came back to her old quarters, and was put in the yard with the other cows for the night.

Unfortunately for her owner's peace of mind, there came up a heavy rain during the night, and in the morning when the Squire came out to look at his purchase, he found his bona fide black and white kicking cow awaiting him. The streaks of black paint revealed the truth to the enraged Squire, and the bull was plainly evident. The way the belled speculator tore round the yard and cursed himself, the cow, Mr. Smith, and the world in general, would have astonished any one who had ever seen the devout and pious Squire Richer at church.

As for No-Horn-Short-Horn, her days upon earth were few and evil, for on the going down of the sun the ensuing day she was lying salted down in a beef barrel in Squire Richer's cellar—a barrel of beef at two hundred and seventy-five dollars—and poor at that!

The Squire had the good sense not to lay the matter to heart; but although he is as social with Mr. Smith as ever, he never mentions trade in his presence.

Jane Smith has taken Simon Midway as her husband, and she is now, we believe, the mother of two little Midways, who are of course, the exact image of their father.

Proverbs and the Professions.

It is said of the three learned professions, that while the doctor lives upon people's diseases, and the lawyer, still more selfish, lives upon their quarrels, the parson, worst of all, lives upon the souls of his congregation.

For the last mentioned is treated far more severely than the two others. The Protestant Dutch are particularly hostile to "the cloth." In their eyes, "an ape, a priest, and a louse, are three devils in one house." The Catholic Spaniard is a little less violent, for he declares that "the devil gets into the belly by the vicar's skirt." Says the Dane, "There is many a knave hid under a surplice;" and adds the Hollander again, "never was hood so holy, but the devil could manage to get his head into it." Avoid them altogether, says the Spaniard again; have "neither a good friend for a friend, nor a bad one for an enemy." Their friendship is not good, for the German proverb affirms that "the priest's friend is God's

Saint Jonathan.
BY JOHN G. SAKE.

There's many an excellent saint;
St. George, with his dragon and lance,
St. Patrick, so jolly and quaint;
St. Vitus, the saint of the dance;
St. Dennis, the saint of the Gaul;
St. Andrew, the saint of the Scot;
But Jonathan, youngest of all,
Is the mightiest saint of the lot!

He wears a most serious face,
Well worthy a martyr's possessing;
But it isn't all owing to grief;
But partly to thinking and guessing;
In sooth, our American saint,
Has rather a secular bias,
And I never have heard a complaint
Of his being excessively pious!

He's fond of financial improvement,
And is always extremely inclined
To start some practical movement,
For mending the morals and mind.
Do you ask me what wonderful labors
St. Jonathan ever has done?
To rank with his Calendar neighbors?
Just listen, a moment, to one:

One day when a flash in the air
Split his meeting-house fairly asunder,
Quoth Jonathan: "Now, I declare,
They're redoubtably careless with thunder!"
So he fastened a rod to the steeple,
And now, when the lightnings come round,
He keeps it from building and people,
By running it into the ground!

Reflecting with pleasant emotion,
On the capital job he had done—
Quoth Jonathan: "I have a notion
Improvements have barely begun;
If nothing's created in vain—
As ministers often inform us—
The lightning that's wasted, 'tis plain,
Is really something enormous!"

While exclaiming over the thing,
At length he discovered a plan
To catch the Electrical King,
And make him the servant of man!
And now, in an orderly way,
He flies on the track of pinions,
And carries the news of the day
All over the master's dominions!

One morning while taking a stroll,
He heard a lugubrious cry—
Like the shriek of a suffering soul—
In a hospital standing near by.
Anon, such a terrible groan
Saluted St. Jonathan's ear,
That his knees—which weren't 't of stone—
Were melted with pity to hear.

That night he invented a charm
So potent that folks who employ it,
In losing a leg or an arm,
Don't suffer—but rather enjoy it!
A miracle, you must allow,
As good as the best of his brothers—
And blessed St. Jonathan now
Is patron of cripples and mothers.

There's many an excellent saint;
St. George, with his dragon and lance,
St. Patrick, so jolly and quaint;
St. Vitus, the saint of the dance;
St. Dennis, the saint of the Gaul;
St. Andrew, the saint of the Scot;
But Jonathan, youngest of all,
Is the mightiest saint of the lot!

September.

September strews the woodland o'er
With many a brilliant color;
The world is brighter than before—
Why should our hearts be duller?
Sorrow and the scarlet fall,
Sad thoughts and weary weather,
Ah! no! this glory and this glad
Agree not well together.

This is the parting season—this
The time when friends are flying
And lovers now, with many a kiss,
Their long farewells are sighing.
Why is earth so gaily dressed?
This pomp that autumn beareth
A funeral scene, where every guest
A bridal garment weareth.

Each one of us, perchance, may hear,
On some blue noon hereafter,
Return to view the gaudy year,
But not with boyish laughter.
We shall then be wracked again,
Our brows with silver laden,
And then this glad morn's 'tuck again
But never more a maiden!

Nature perhaps foresees that Spring
Will touch her teeming bosom,
And that a few brief months will bring
The bird, the bee, the blossom.
Ah! these forests do not know—
Or would less brightly whiten—
The Virgin that adorns them so
Will never more come hither!

Anecdotes.

A little girl of some five summers desired to serve a vegetable which stood before her on a public table.
May I give you some? she asked, turning to a lady near her.
The lady, who was an invalid, smilingly replied:
No dear; my mamma doesn't allow me any.

Then, said the child, I will help somebody who hasn't any mamma.
Have you any domestic manufactures to report? asked a census marshal, of the female head of the family rejoicing in the bloom of health.
Well, yes, said she, with something of embarrassment in her voice and countenance, we have eight, with a continued prospect.

I will never marry a woman who can't carve, said M.
Why not? inquired his friend.
Because she would not be a helpmeet for me.

A lazy genius being asked, as he lay sunning himself in the grass, what was the height of his ambition, replied:
To marry a rich widow that's got a bad cough.
